WILSON BLAMES MIDDLEMAN FOR HIGH FOOD PRICES

Urges Bigger Crops to Make Recurrence of Present Situation Forever Impossible.

GIVES ADVICE TO FARMERS

President, Addressing National Grange, Says Greater Areas Must Be Cultivated.

LAUDS RURAL CREDITS LAW

Says the Country's Capital, for the First Time, Is Ready to Aid Agricultural Industry.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—President Wilson held the middleman responsible for the high cost of foodstuffs tonight in a speech welcoming to Washington the convention of the National Grange, the first formal speech he has delivered since the election. Urging that farmers increase their output, the President said:

"We ought to raise such big crops that circumstances like the present can never recur, when men can make as if the supply was so short that the middleman could charge for it what he pleased. It will not do to be niggardly with the rest of the world in respect to its food supply."

The President did not mention recent petitions to him to declare an embargo on the exportation of foodstuffs from the United States, and he did not refer even indirectly to the outcome of the Presidential election. His address was interrupted frequently by applause from the farmers attending the fiftieth anniversary celebraton of the founding of the Grange.

Problems of the Farmers.

The President spoke in part as follows:

"It goes without saying that the physical life of the nation has always depended upon the farm. It goes without saying, also, that to a large extent the physical life of the world has drawn its sustenance from the great areas of farm land in the United States. We have sent food to all parts of the world, and the American farmer has contributed to the life of all the countries of the world. But you know that as our own population has increased the proportion in which we could help foreign countries as contrasted with our own has decreased and there are problems that are comparable with the problems of statesmanship lying ahead of the farmers of the United States.

"I have been very much interested in conferring with the Secretary of Agriculture to find that although the laboratory and the investigations of the man of science who was not directly concerned with the farm have had a great deal to do with the promotion of agriculture in the United States, as elsewhere, that has had still more to do with it has been the intelligent farming of the individual farmer. Most of the methods which the demonstrators of the Department of Agriculture have been busy to spread as far and wide as possible have been methods which they have learned from the most accomplished and best instructed farmers in the United States.

"In other words, the Department of Agriculture has had, as one of its most important duties, to put all the farmers of the United States, so far as possible, where the best of the farmers of the United States had got of their own initiative and of their own intelligence. That, after all, is the business of education anyhow—to spread the product of the best minds far and wide, so that they may be accessible to everybody.

"But in the future we have got to bring more of the area of the United States under cultivation than is under cultivation now. We have got to increase the product at every point where it is susceptible of being increased. We have got to study the variation of crops. We have got to study how to assist nature, or at any rate understand nature, by making the most suitable use of our several and varied soils. One of the things that has interested me most, for example, is that what we have called the pine barrens of our Southern coast need not be barrens at all; that if we add a single additional chemical element we can make the sand blossom and bloom and produce crops, and that if nature is only questioned closely enough she will yield us her richest products for our own assistance and for the assistance of the rest of the world.

"We have got to look closely into these secrets, and we have got to realize that there must go forth from the United States the best agricultural intelligence of all the world. We have got the means. We have got the purpose. We have started along the right lines.

Loans for the Farmer.

"One of the things that has most interested me about what has been done recently by legislation for the benefit of the farmer is the question why it was not done long before. It is astonishing that the assets—the valuable available assets, the visible assets—of the farm should not have been available as a basis of credit in the banks on the same terms as the assets of commercial undertaking and manufacturing industry. Cattle are just as visible and tangible as goods in warehouses and goods on trains.

"Credit based on cattle is as good as credit based on bills of lading, and the astonishing thing is not that it has been done now, but that it took so long to do it. And when you add to that what has been done by the Rural Credits bill in the way of long-extended credit you will see that we have, so to say, got ready for the first time to use the capital of this country to push forward the agricultural industry of this country. We have liberated the credits of the banks and we have mobilized, through the Department of Agriculture, the scientific intelligence of the world.

"With that combination, every nation in the world ought to come to us to learn how to raise big crops.

"We ought to raise such big crops that circumstances like the present can never recur, when men can make as if the supply was so short that the middleman could charge for it what he pleased. It will not do to be niggardly with the world in respect of its food supply.

"I always feel the poignant truth of a sermon I once heard, where it was pointed out that the first petition in the Lord's Prayer was 'Give us this day our daily bread,' the preacher going on to observe that you could not worship God or anything else on an empty stomach, and that our Lord per-

Wilson Thanks California For People's Victory

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—President Wilson thanked California today for its support in the election, in a telegram to O. K. Cushing, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee. The President said:

"The work that you and those associated with you have done in the cause of genuine democracy and the maintenance of progressive policy has excited my sincere admiration, as it might have won the admiration of all who have observed the devotion and spirit and intelligence with which it was done. May I not express my sense of real gratitude and join with you in rejoicing over the victory won for the people?"

WATCH CALIFORNIA VOTES FOR A SPLIT

NET RESULTS UNCHANGED

San Francisco Reports 190 Gain for Wilson, Los Angeles 190 for Hughes as Rechecking Continues.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—Whether the highest vote for a Republican elector in California was greater than the lowest vote for a Democratic elector was about the only question of interest to California politicians tonight. If this should prove to be the case, the State's delegation in the Electoral College may be split. The Republicans admittedly unearthed nothing in the course of the day to indicate for or against such a prospect.

Wilson's plurality in California was increased by 190 votes by returns from County Clerks today. The count progressed slowly, and was far from complete in the larger counties.

Sidney M. Van Wyck, Jr., Chairman of the Democratic State Campaign Committee, worked all day bringing in reports from little counties in the mountains where the County Clerks had finished their count, and also succeeded in getting one or two fair-sized counties. His total for twenty counties showed that the totals for the lowest Democratic elector in each county added 6,406 votes more than the totals for the highest Republican elector in the same counties.

This count would show, when completed, the Wilson electoral vote at its lowest ebb, Mr. Van Wyck said. That is to say, if the lowest Democratic totals are finally ahead of the highest Republican totals, a solid delegation in the Electoral College is assured. If the highest Republican totals exceed the lowest Democratic totals, this will not necessarily indicate that any Republican elector wins, because the lowest Democrat and the highest Republican are not the same in all counties.

Republicans and Democrats alike manifested surprise at rumors, traceable in all cases to the East, that a considerable error had been found somewhere in the State in counting the votes.

"The mistake as reported would have to be in San Francisco, Alameda, or Los Angeles County," said Mr. Van Wyck. "If it is in none of them, and, so far as we have been able to learn, it does not exist. The final count will show no material change."

Reports from Republican Headquarters were similar.

"The completed count for California will not show a difference of more than ten votes one way or the other from figures already given on the Presidency," Mr. Van Wyck said. He based his assertion on examination of returns from all counties in which the County Clerks have completed their work.

Minor gains and losses, seldom more than a dozen votes in a precinct, thus far have counterbalanced each other, Mr. Van Wyck said.

At the Headquarters of the Republican Presidential Campaign Committee, it was said that returns from six counties indicated that interest centred entirely in the divergence between the vote for top and bottom electors on the tickets. No predictions, it was said, could be made as to what this might amount to.

"We have no startling information of any sort," said Sylvester C. McAtee, Secretary of the committee. "There are no indications of notable divergensies from the unofficial count. We are simply counting to see what the count develops."

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—A net gain of 190 votes was made by Charles E. Hughes today in the first day's official count of the Presidential vote cast last Tuesday. Twenty-two errors were discovered by the Board of Supervisors, resulting in Hughes's gain of 150 votes, loss of 15, and President Wilson's loss of 55, giving the Republican candidate a net gain of 190.

There are 1,215 precincts in Los Angeles City and County, and the returns from more than a thousand of them have been canvassed in the last two days.

FALSE RECOUNT RUMOR SENDS STOCKS HIGHER

Many Issues Up 2 to 12 Points on Report That Hughes Had Gained in California Vote.

Politics was an influence behind sentiment in yesterday's trading in stocks, having its basis in a series of rumors that the official recount of the California vote might yet swing the Presidency to Hughes. In the late afternoon a story on the Exchange that the President's lead was being reduced materially was accompanied by a sharp buying movement, which left many industrial and mining stocks from 2 to 12 points higher than they closed on Monday. The rumor was not based on fact, as Mr. Wilson maintained his lead in the California recount yesterday.

Steel gained 2½ points, American Smelting and Refining 4¾ points, Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies 6¼, Central Leather 2⅝, Crucible Steel 3¼, Mexican Petroleum 3½, New York Air Brake 12⅜, and United States Industrial Alcohol 3⅝ points.

The fact that the rumors were taken seriously in some quarters was established through the resumption of the

BLACKLIST LEGAL, ALSO JUST TO US, BRITAIN CONTENDS

NOT AIMED AT NEUTRALS

SEES NO SIGN OF PEACE

"Still a Long and Bitter Struggle Ahead," Is Foreign Minister's Expressed Opinion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Great Britain's reply to the American protest against the trade blacklist, one of the most important communications received from London since the beginning of the war, was made public tonight.

The note, dated Oct. 10, is in reply to the American note of July 28, and bears the signature of Viscount Grey of Fallodon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. In this communication, which is conceded to be one of the strongest documents received from Viscount Grey since the war began, the action of the British Government in placing American firm names on the blacklist is justified as being within the right of that Government and involving no infraction of international law.

It is semi-officially admitted here that the note will be a difficult one for the American Government to challenge. There will probably be a response, but in the American reply, it is intimated from a high quarter, it will be impossible for the American Government to attack the blacklisting of American firms as a violation of international law. It is virtually admitted that the defense made by Viscount Grey of the legal right of the British Government to forbid its subjects to deal with any firms that trade with the enemies of Great Britain is unanswerable from the standpoint of international law.

Admits Peace Is Remote.

Through the medium of Viscount Grey's note, the United States receives officially the important information that the end of the European war is not yet in sight.

"The idea would seem to be prevalent," says Viscount Grey's note, "that the military position is now such that it is unnecessary * * * to take steps which might prejudice, even to a slight degree, the commerce of neutral nations, that the end of the war is in sight, and that nothing which happens in distant neutral countries can affect the ultimate result.

"If," continues the note, "that were really the position, it is possible that the measures taken might be described as uncalled for, but it is not. Even though the military situation of the Allies has greatly improved, there is still a long and bitter struggle in front of them, and one which in justice to the principles for which they are fighting imposes upon them the duty of employing every opportunity and every measure which they can legitimately use to overcome their opponents."

Viscount Grey, in his exhaustive treatment of the blacklist, goes beyond the mere legal aspects of the issue, and, besides offering other justification for the blacklisting of neutral firms, deals with certain broader phases of the relations of neutral and belligerent commerce and other wider aspects of the war.

The indications are that in the response to be made by this Government modification of the blacklist policy, so far as it affects firms domiciled in this country, will be urged on the broader ground of international comity, rather than under international law, and that it will be argued that while the British Government has a right to forbid its own citizens to deal with firms abroad which deal with the enemy, nevertheless the effect of the British blacklist on certain American firms has been to prevent other neutrals dealing with these firms through fear of being themselves blacklisted. Great British Government's position is that its blacklist is "purely municipal legislation," and only prohibits persons in the United Kingdom from trading with persons in foreign countries who trade or associate with the enemy.

Viscount Grey denies that the British Government is seeking to impose disabilities or penalties on neutrals or neutral commerce. "The measure," he says, "is simply one which enjoins those who owe allegiance to Great Britain to cease having trade relations with persons who are found to be assisting or rendering service to the enemy." Viscount Grey says he can "scarcely believe" that the United States Government intends to challenge the right of Great Britain as a sovereign State to pass such legislation respecting those who owe her allegiance.

Complains of German Plots.

After careful elaboration of the legal aspects of the question Viscount Grey goes into the activities of Germans in neutral countries and in the United States, and points out his belief that the United States Government has yet taken "no adequate action" to suppress "breaches of neutrality" by Germans in this country.

The experience of the war, asserts Viscount Grey, has proved that many Germans in neutral countries have done all in their power to help the cause of their own country and injure that of the Allies.

"In fact," says the British note, "it would be no exaggeration to say that German houses abroad have in a large number of cases been used as an integral part of an organization deliberately conceived and planned as an engine for the furtherance of German political and military ambitions. It is common knowledge that German business establishments in foreign countries have been not merely centres of German trade, but active agents for the dissemination of German political and social influence and for the purpose of espionage. In some cases they have even been used as bases of supply for German cruisers, and in other cases as organizers and paymasters of miscreants employed to destroy by foul means factories engaged in making or ships engaged in carrying, supplies required by the Allies. Such operations have been carried out in the territory even of the United States itself, and I am bound to observe, what I do not think will be denied, that no adequate action has yet been taken by the Government of the United States to suppress breaches of neutrality of this particu-

British Deny Cruelty to U-41 Survivors; No Order Against Rescuing U-Boat Crews

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Admiralty has issued a further reply to the German charge regarding the treatment of survivors of the German submarine U-41, including the report of the commander of the British ship which sank the submarine, and affirms:

"It is directly, explicitly, and completely untrue to allege that there exists, or ever has existed, an Admiralty order that it is not necessary to rescue the survivors of the crews of German submarines."

The commander's report denies that his ship headed toward the boat containing survivors, and says that the boat was not struck, but that when the ship was twenty yards from them the men dived overboard. They climbed into the boat later and were picked up ten minutes afterward. There was no surgeon aboard the ship, but the wounded prisoner was treated with as great care as possible. His wounds were washed and bandaged as best possible.

"The prisoners were not confined closely," adds the commander, "but were comfortably bestowed in the poop with ample bedding, blankets, &c. They appeared to be perfectly satisfied with their accommodations. Medical aid was given the wounded prisoner on arrival at port on the following morning, Sept. 25, by a doctor who came aboard.

"The prisoners were given dry clothing and everything needed from the ship's stores immediately they came aboard, and the paymaster had my full permission to supply them with all they asked for, which he did. The prisoners were kept aboard two days, pending arrangements for their disposal, and the unwounded prisoner was kept in an empty storeroom under the poop. He was evidently pleased with his treatment, but the wounded officer, who was confined to bed, was always surly, probably owing to the seriousness of his wound. Both prisoners, when rescued, were in a highly nervous and excited state, and were not in a position to judge what was being done for them."

The British Admiralty on Nov. 6 issued a statement denying that it had ever given orders that survivors of German submarines need not be rescued. This followed allegations by the German Admiralty regarding the sinking of the U-41, which it characterized as a second Baralong case, and in which a British patrol ship flying the American colors, it was alleged, after destroying the submarine, deliberately ran down a rowboat containing the only two survivors. This incident occurred on Sept. 24, 1915.

According to the British Admiralty a British auxiliary flying a neutral flag approached a German submarine engaged in sinking a British merchantman on that date. When within range the auxiliary hoisted a white naval ensign and fired on and sank the submarine and then rescued the crew of the merchantman from their boats. When this was done, the auxiliary also rescued two of the submarine's crew, who had climbed into a drifting boat.

WILL INVESTIGATE MONEY IN CAMPAIGN

Action by Senate Planned by Administration—To Question Wealthy Contributors.

CONTESTS PROMISED, TOO

Government Pushing Inquiry Into Election of Republican Senators in Indiana and West Virginia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Definite plans were laid by Administration leaders today for having the Senate begin an investigation as soon as Congress convenes of the use of money in the late Presidential campaign. Several Senators have discussed the question with officials of the Administration and it was said tonight that the investigation would be held beyond question.

Suggestions were made that President Wilson might mention the subject in his next message to Congress in recommending passage of a corrupt practice act, but some officials thought he would take the position that he should leave the question to the Senate in view of the fact that he himself was a candidate. Senator Reed of Missouri will confer with the President tomorrow and the question may be brought up at that time.

As outlined by officials today, the investigation will be thorough, and will include the cross-examination of wealthy men, supposed to have made campaign contributions, as well as of the men in charge of the spending of money raised for the campaign. A resolution providing the machinery for the inquiry is ready to be introduced soon after Congress convenes next month. It was stated today that evidence was being collected, but its details were not disclosed.

Senatorial Contests Planned.

Various reports concerning use of money in certain States have come to Democratic Headquarters as well as Republican Headquarters. Investigation of alleged attempts to colonize illegal voters, in Indiana and West Virginia particularly, was begun several weeks before election. In those States Democratic leaders are planning to contest the election of United States Senators. Before the polls had closed last Tuesday charges of corruption were being openly made by Democratic chieftains, and predictions were freely circulated that exposures would follow the election.

Evidence is being gathered upon which to base contests of the election of Harry S. New and James E. Watson as Senators from Indiana, and Representative Howard Sutherland as Senator from West Virginia. New, on the face of the Indiana returns, elected by majority of 1,955. Watson won from Senator Taggart. Sutherland in West Virginia defeated Senator Chilton.

It has been charged by Democrats that negroes were colonized from the South in States where the Republicans triumphed by small majorities.

The Department of Justice announced that its investigation would proceed in various States, despite the fact that the elections were over, and said that prosecutions were to follow where the law has been violated. The department issued this statement:

"It was stated at the Department of Justice today that the fact that the election is over will not in any way delay or abate the investigation in the different States of alleged violations of the Federal statutes relative to elections. Where the facts developed justify, prosecutions promptly will be instituted. It was pointed out that these investigations are in no way political matters, but questions of violations of law, and would be so treated.

"No details of the progress of the investigations can be given as this would be contrary to the general practice of the department, and would manifestly militate against the proper enforcement of the law.

"No further announcement with regard to the matter is contemplated. Such action as may finally be taken will become publicly known when prosecutions are instituted in the districts where the law has been violated."

While the statement does not name any States it is known that a large force of special agents has been working in Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, New York, Illinois, Indiana and other States. Officials decline to say in what States evidence has been obtained.

"Ridiculous," Says Hays.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14.—"Ridiculous," declared Will H. Hays, Republican State Chairman, when informed that the election of Harry S. New and James E. Watson for the United States Senate probably would be contested.

"Every one who knows anything about the campaign and election in Indiana," Mr. Hays added, "knows they were absolutely free from fraud or irregularities whatsoever. We evidently hear the wailings of defeated gentlemen who cannot take their reversals gracefully."

The Federal Grand Jury, which was sworn in today, will take up the inves-

ELECTORAL SYSTEM WRONG, SAYS BRYAN

He Would Have Electors Selected by Congressional Districts.

TALKS OF PROHIBITION

Predicts That Both Great Parties Will Soon Be Jockeying for "Dry" Vote.

William Jennings Bryan, who arrived last night at the Holland House on what he described as a business trip, thinks that this year's election has demonstrated that there is need for a reform in the Electoral system. He would not abolish the Electoral College altogether, however, but thinks that the Congressional district rather than the State should be the unit of selection.

"I think the closeness of this election has thrown light on one of the defects of our system of election," said Mr. Bryan. "Since the vote is for Electors and not for the candidate, not all the electors receive the same vote; some run ahead because of their personal popularity, and some behind because they are personally disliked. This means that it is possible for the will of the people to be defeated. Then, too, an Elector may die or a disability in one of those chosen be discovered."

"Do you mean a vote directly for the candidate?" Mr. Bryan was asked.

"No," he said. "The objection to that is that in sections which are strongly allied with one party or the other it would be difficult to prevent the practice of fraud, and a few votes that might be changed by illegal methods might decide the national election. The chance of this would be minimized if the electors were selected by the Congressional districts instead of by the States at large. The Electoral College has outlived its usefulness. The electors have no discretion whatever, and it is merely a cumbersome piece of machinery of no use at best and a possible source of danger at the worst.

"I think it would be better to have the vote cast by districts, for this would give greater equality, and the two additional Electors for each State could be chosen at large. This whole subject is likely to be brought up for discussion before long, and out of the discussion may come some remedy which will insure what the people really want, namely, the election of the man who is the choice of the majority."

Speaking of the prohibition question, Mr. Bryan predicted that the Republicans would seize it as an issue if the Democrats did not and, adding that the Democratic Party could not afford to take "the immoral side of a moral issue," said that he would work during the next four years to make the "National Democracy dry."

Mr. Bryan pointed out that of the twenty-two dry States seventeen went for Mr. Wilson, and that in four other States which he carried prohibition received favorable indorsement. He thought it not improbable that the next few years would find both great parties jockeying for the country's dry vote.

"When the issue arises it must be met, and the prohibition issue is here," Mr. Bryan said. "The Democratic Party cannot afford to become the champion of the brewery, the distillery, and the saloon. Members of the party will not permit it to be buried in a drunkard's grave."

Mr. Bryan refused to discuss details of politics, and said that his brief stay in New York—he is going to Indianapolis on Monday night, and thence to Chicago—had no political significance whatever. He would admit, however, that the peace sentiment had a great deal to do with the re-election of the President, especially in the West, and that its influence was most evident in the States where women had the ballot. But when asked if he thought that this sentiment had been shown to a degree sufficient to justify the Administration in adopting a more pacific policy with less interest in preparedness, he was unwilling to express an opinion.

AIM FOR EXTRA HOUR A DAY

National Congress Called to Discuss Saving Daylight Plan.

The adoption of the "daylight-saving plan," by setting the clock forward one hour in the United States, through public concurrence, from May 1 to Sept. 30, 1917, will be considered at a national daylight-saving convention to be held here on Jan. 30 and 31 next, plans for which were announced yesterday.

Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade throughout the country will be represented, and the Governors of all States, the Mayors of 150 cities, the American Bankers' Association and State banking organizations, the American Federation of Labor and various other commercial, financial, labor and scientific bodies will be requested to send delegates.

The American Railway Association has been asked to lend its support and will consider the project at its semi-annual meeting here today. A report drawn up by a committee headed by E. B. Thomas, President of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, will be submitted recommending that, while the roads should not antagonize the movement, they should not agree to the plan "until it has been previously adopted by the principal business and municipal centres, together with the State and local authorities." Individually, many of the railroad Presidents favor the plan, according to information received by the New York Daylight Saving Committee, which has arranged the national convention.

BRITISH PUSH ON UP ANCRE VALLEY; SEIZE BEAUCOURT

GERMANS ADMIT LOSSES

SHELLING SOUTH OF SOMME

Paris Reports Violent Artillery Bombardments at Several Points.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—By dint of hard and continuous fighting the British advanced further up the Valley of the Ancre today, capturing the village of Beaucourt, on the outskirts of which they were halted yesterday. Prisoners taken since the beginning of this new drive number considerably over 5,000, the War Office announces tonight, and more Germans are being brought in.

East of the Butte de Warencourt, the formidable height which faces the direct British advance on Bapaume, General Haig's troops made local attacks today in the nature of a diversion, gaining some ground and bringing in 80 prisoners.

The British official statement this afternoon confirmed yesterday's reports that the village of Beaumont-Hamel, heavily fortified by its defenders, was captured.

The French troops on the Somme front showed little activity, although south of the river there were intense artillery bombardments, particularly violent in the sectors of Pressoire and Biaches. The Germans made an infantry attack last night in the Champagne district, but the attacking troops were unable to reach the French lines.

The British report issued this evening reads:

The village of Beaucourt-sur-Ancre is in our hands. The prisoners reported to date number considerably over five thousand and more are coming in.

Today a local advance was made east of Butte de Warlencourt. Practically all our objectives were gained. Some eighty prisoners were taken in this area.

The British afternoon report says:

We stormed the heavily fortified village of Beaumont-Hamel and advanced on the outskirts of Beaucourt-sur-Ancre. The number of prisoners is increasing considerably. Over 4,000 have passed through collecting stations since yesterday morning.

The fighting continues.

The bulletin issued by the French War Office tonight follows:

South of the Somme during the day the enemy artillery, which was vigorously replied to by our guns, violently bombarded the region of Pressoire and the sector of Biaches and La Maisonnette.

In the Argonne we occupied at Le Four de Paris a crater caused by the explosion of a German mine.

On the Verdun front there was an intermittent cannonade, more active in the regions of Douaumont and Vaux. Everywhere else the day was quiet.

The text of the French afternoon statement reads:

South of the Somme the artillery duel was somewhat lively during the night in the region of Pressoire.

In the Champagne, a strong enemy detachment which tried to approach our line after a violent bombardment was easily repulsed by our fire west of Auberive.

The night was calm on the rest of the front.

Germans Admit Heavy Losses.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (via London.)—The stubborn defense made by the Germans of the positions near the River Ancre, which were attacked yesterday by the British, caused the defenders to suffer important losses, the War Office announced today. The capture by the British of Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Divion, with the lateral connecting lines, is reported. The text of the official statement says:

Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—On both sides of the River Ancre yesterday there was violent fighting. Strong British attacks prepared by concentrated artillery fire of the heaviest calibres were launched against our positions forming an angle to the southwestward. The enemy under considerable sacrifices succeeded in pushing us back from Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Divion, together with the lines adjoining leading into the prepared positions. Our tenacious defense caused us considerable losses.

Other places of the front were under attack from the east of Hebuterne as far as the south of Grandcourt. Wherever the British had entered they were ejected by the brisk counterattacks of our infantry.

French attacks in the sector of Sailly-Saillisel failed.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince—On the east bank of the River Meuse (Verdun region) there was a lively artillery fire in the evening hours. French reconnoitring advances against our Haudremont line were repulsed.

ENTIRE BATTALION CAPTURED.

British Did Not Fire a Shot Until They Reached German Trenches.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The British attack now in progress in the Ancre region was preceded by four days of intense bombardment, and began in a dense fog, says La Liberté's correspondent at the front. The British, he says, did not at first fire a shot, and were not perceived until they were upon the Germans.

Rising from a creeping attitude when a few yards from the German trenches, they charged with loud hurrahs. A French officer who was present said he observed with astonishment the progress the British troops had made. Every man, says the correspondent, seemed to have a separate mission, and when he fell, another immediately went after the same objective.

At the village of St. Pierre Divion, where the fighting was exceptionally bitter, the British delivered ten assaults, and a whole German battalion, according to the writer, with the Major command-

Norwegian Torpedo Boat Fires on German Vessel

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Nov. 14, (via London.)—The Morgenbladt says that a Norwegian torpedo boat has fired upon a German steamer which refused to stop when passing Stavanger.

The Norwegian vessel fired a shot at the rigging, the newspaper says, then boarded the steamer and dismantled her wireless.

Since the beginning of the war foreign ships have not been permitted to carry wireless installation when in Norwegian waters.

SERBS NOW BATTLE ON MONASTIR PLAIN

With French Aid They Have Fought Clear Through Mountain Ranges on the East.

BORDER DEFENSES FLANKED

Twenty-five Guns and 1,447 Prisoners, Mostly Germans, Captured in Two Days.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Having fought its way clear through the mountain ranges on the east of the plain of Monastir, the Serbian Army, aided by French artillery and French infantry supports, has reached the edge of the plain, thus rendering practically untenable the entire line of powerful frontier defenses to the south based on Kenali on the railroad to Monastir.

The following communication issued by Serbian Headquarters yesterday and received here today says:

On Monday we fought sanguinary engagements with the Bulgarians and Germans on the Cerna Reka, which are not yet concluded. The enemy is offering stubborn resistance, hence certain trenches are repeatedly changing hands. At the close of the day we were in definite possession of very important enemy positions near Tepavtsi.

Apart from enormous losses inflicted on the enemy in killed and wounded we have taken 1,000 prisoners, mostly Germans, and including a German battalion commander and several German officers. The booty is important, but details are not available.

The War Office in Paris today gave details of the prisoners and booty in the following announcement:

Army of the East—There was no infantry action yesterday. The artillery duel continued lively between the Cerna and Presba Lake.

The booty captured by the Franco-Serbians in the fighting from Nov. 10 to 12 comprised 25 guns, including 8 heavy guns, 21 caissons, a large number of rifles and grenades, and other material. More than 1,447 prisoners were taken, among them 20 officers, one a Colonel.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Entente forces have attacked the German-Bulgarian lines on the Monastir Plain, the War Office announced in today's official report on fighting along the Macedonian front. The battle is still in progress both on this plain and north of the Cerna. The statement follows:

Macedonian Front—In the district of Koron our reconnoitering detachments renewed their skirmishing with French infantry and cavalry.

Attacks by Entente troops on the Monastir Plain and north of the Cerna are in progress, the fighting not yet being ended.

ATHENS Nov. 12, (via London, Nov. 14.)—Further details of the Serbian victory in the Cerna River region last week have been given The Associated Press by King Peter of Serbia. Chuke Height, on the western slope of Seltza Mountains, which was captured Friday, dominates the Cerna Valley and the road to Monastir and Prilep. The victory also puts the Serbs in touch with the French at Baudénzi and apparently renders a combined advance on Negotin, on the east bank of the Cerna, and Tepavtsi, on the slopes of Seltza, the inevitable next move, comparatively easy.

The Germans and Bulgars were most strongly fortified on Chuke, as it was the last height before the plain extending to Monastir. Opposite Negotin, on the west bank of the Cerna, an extensive marsh forms the only remaining obstacle to an attempt at the encirclement of Kenali, where the Germans and Bulgars are still in force, and to an advance on Monastir.

More than 1,500 German and Bulgarians were made prisoners, among them 30 officers, and 8 mortars, 15 machine guns, and several mountain guns.

Serbian military officers here are delighted over the situation. They declare that now that the Monastir offensive has proceeded beyond the mountains it can be continued despite the Winter, as the cold weather and freezing of the marshes will assist the operations.

ARABIA SURVIVORS SAY PLEDGE IS BROKEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 14.—A complete report of all the circumstances surrounding the sinking of the Peninsular and Oriental Line steamship Arabia is to be submitted by the British Government to the United States. In the opinion of the survivors who have passed through Rome, the incident furnishes one of the best examples of the Central Empires' disregard of all the promises and pledges given to Washington.

The survivors, without distinction as to nationality, are unanimous in saying that the Arabia was attacked without any warning. Also that the Arabia did nothing in the way of attempting to escape or attacking the submarine. Thus, the survivors contend, her sinking, despite the loss of but a few lives, assumes the same gravity as the Lusitania and Ancona tragedies.

Colonel Henry Colgate, a well-known English physician belonging to the Military Sanitary Corps, who was returning from India to Europe aboard the Arabia, gave a graphic description of the attack on the vessel.

"When the terrific explosion occured at the stern of the ship she literally jumped into the air," said he.

"The lower part of the vessel was torn asunder, and the engine rooms were plunged into darkness. The scene was totally different from those described in similar disasters. There was no panic nor any confusion. There was no crowding among the passengers. A few children screamed, but they were soon quieted by their parents.

LANSING CABLES REMONSTRANCE ON EXILE OF BELGIANS

Directs Berlin Embassy to Inform Bethmann Hollweg of America's Feeling.

SEES PROMISES BROKEN

Those Made to Gerard Regarding French Deportations Are Held to Apply to Belgians.

ALSO BREAKS NATIONS' LAW

Word from Our Embassy on Deportations Led State Department to Take Action.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The good offices of the United States Government are being exerted in an effort to bring a halt to the deportation of Belgian civilians into Germany for forced labor.

Instructions dealing with the subject have been sent by Secretary Lansing to Joseph C. Grew, Secretary of the American Embassy at Berlin, who is Chargé d'Affaires in the absence of Ambassador Gerard, who is in this country on leave.

These instructions direct Mr. Grew to take the matter up personally with Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, in an effort to persuade the German authorities that these deportations should be stopped, by pointing out that the removal of Belgians into Germany for forced labor is having a most unfavorable impression on neutral public opinion, and especially on neutral opinion in the United States, where there is, and has been since the beginning of the war great solicitude for the welfare of the Belgian population.

No Joint Action Expected.

The action of the United States is informal and not official, but the instructions to Mr. Grew direct him to present the matter in such a way that will leave no doubt of the deep concern of the Washington Government, speaking for the American people, over the deportation of Belgians for forced labor. The United States is also acting independently in the matter, and not jointly with any other neutral, although its good offices are being exercised in harmony with the views of other neutral Governments.

The instructions, it was learned today, came as the sequel to a long report from Mr. Grew, in which he said that he had discussed the situation informally and unofficially with Dr. Zimmermann, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs. The latter admitted that a definite policy had been adopted to enforce the labor of Belgians in cases where they would not work voluntarily on the ground that so many refused to work as to make the strain on public charity intolerable.

A special dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle from Rome, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning, asserted that it was authoritatively stated there that the Pope, Spain, and the United States were "preparing to take joint action to stop the German deportation of Belgian laborers." It has also been stated that the Dutch Government was ready to join in such a protest. It was officially stated here today that the United States Government had not joined Spain, the Vatican, or Holland in a joint protest, and that reports to the effect that it would enter such a movement for joint action were untrue.

As in other cases in which the United States Government has taken steps for the relief of civil populations—as in Belgium, Poland, Syria, Armenia and other war areas—complete independence of action is being preserved by the Administration in its present efforts on behalf of the Belgians, in which it is seeking not only to stop the deportation, but, if possible, to have returned to Belgium those who have already been exiled to perform forced labor.

The action taken in favor of the Belgians is in line with what the United States Government has just done for the amelioration of the status of the French women of Lille who were deported to Germany. This matter was presented to the Imperial Chancellor by Ambassador Gerard, and is understood to have been taken up by the Chancellor with the German Emperor himself, with the result, it is asserted, that the women will be returned to France.

The deportations of Belgians are regarded here as a violation of the spirit of Germany's engagement to desist from similar treatment of the women of Lille and other French towns in the territory occupied by the Germans. Moreover, they are held to be in violation of well recognized principles of international law.

Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium, has issued a protest to the civilized world against the deportation of Belgians to Germany for forced labor. The text of this protest, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning, asserts that military authorities are daily deporting thousands of inoffensive citizens in order to set them to forced labor.

As early as Oct. 19 the Belgian Primate, acting in behalf of the Belgian Bishops, sent a protest to General von Bissing, Governor General of Belgium, and a copy of this protest was sent to the representatives in Brussels of the United States, Spain, Holland, and the Holy See. In reply General von Bissing refused to take any steps to prevent the Belgian deportations.

Aim to Set German Workers Free.

The deportations are regarded by some officials here as an attempt to release German workers for the firing line by replacing them with Belgians.

More than any other one thing this is expected to increase the bitterness of the Allies toward Germany and their desire for peace through a crushing victory.

Reports as to the execution of the deportation order vary in detail, but not in principle. Those who go to Germany voluntarily are made to sign a general free-will contract under which good food, a salary, guarantee of care for their families, and freedom of correspondence with them, are assured to the workmen. Those who refuse to sign are said to be coerced, where this is possible, through imprisonment. If this is unsuccessful in securing their signatures, the labor is compulsory at 30 pfennigs, (about 7 cents,) a day without provision for their families or permission to correspond with them.

The deportations assumed their most systematic form when, on Oct. 10, the German Governor General was reported to have requested the Presidents of the Comités Nationale de Sécours, under penalty of imprisonment, to furnish lists of all Belgians receiving aid. Many of the Presidents refused, and were at once put in jail. On the basis of the lists that were obtained, however, drafts were begun at once. No accurate information has been received either as to how many have been deported or to what points. The work to which they have been sent is designated as "industrial."

BE TRAITORS OR STARVE.

That is the Alternative Offered Belgians, Government at Havre Says.

HAVRE, Nov. 14, (via Paris.)—The Belgian Government is in possession of the text of a decree issued from German Headquarters under date of Oct. 3 subjecting to forced labor all Belgians able to work who, for want of employment or for any other reason, are receiving public support. Those subject to this decree, it is pointed out, may be compelled to work away from their domiciles—that is, may be sent to Germany.

The Belgian Government fears that the decree is about to be applied to the whole occupied territory, as a census is being taken by the German military authorities of all the unemployed in Belgium. The object of the Germans, the Belgian Government declares, in addition to ruining Belgian industries and forcing Belgian workmen to accept against their conscience work offered by the Germans, is thus to release German workmen for the purpose of supplying in the army losses incurred in the fighting.

If it were otherwise, the Belgian Government contends, if the Germans only designed to combat the idleness of Belgian workmen, it could employ them on public works in the neighborhood of their homes and families. The statement adds:

"They have not done this, but, on the contrary, have sent out of the country or purposely deprived of employment workmen who had never ceased to work. The Germans have offered the attraction of high wages to those who consent voluntarily to deportation, and thus, by exciting hopes of bettering their lot, to do work directly connected with the war. The deported Belgian has thus the choice between starving and treason."

It is understood that the Belgian Government is placing the case before the neutral Governments by every diplomatic means.

The Belgian Cabinet, terming itself "the authorized organ of a nation condemned to the silence of death," sent today to King Albert on the occasion of the fête day of his patron saint a telegram of felicitation. The message said the present time was particularly painful to their unfortunate country, as the war continued to be more and more odious and cruel. Despite the sufferings of the people, the message added, the Cabinet was confident of "a revengeful victory."

The members of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies also sent a congratulatory telegram to the King. It likewise condemned the acts of Germany in Belgium.

SAYS GERMANS AID BELGIANS.

Dr. MacElwee Tells of Efforts to Rehabilitate Industries.

A picture of Germany building up industries for the benefit of the Belgian people, passing industrial legislation for the protection of labor and the employment of women and children, and the efforts of Governor General von Bissing to rehabilitate Belgium along industrial lines, was drawn last night by Dr. Roy Samuel MacElwee, in Havemeyer Hall, in a lecture before the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. MacElwee was pursuing studies in Germany when the war broke out, and as a student of economics he was permitted by the German officials to visit the industrial centers of Belgium.

"After the fighting armies had passed across Belgium," Dr. MacElwee said, "its industrial life was paralyzed. As soon as possible a civil government was established, to replace martial law, which set to work at once to reanimate the business and industrial life of the country. For instance, the civil government of the Province of Namur was established on Sept. 4, 1914. In November they found an old locomotive, which was repaired and used to draw coal trains over the Jemeppe-Gambloux line. From this small beginning one plant after another has been able to resume operations and give employment to many people. The foundation of all industry is coal, the distribution of which is regulated by a 'coal central' in Brussels. There is also an 'oil central' to supply lubricating oils and soaps. The two main industrial districts, Liége and Charleroi, are each under a Commissioner for mines and industries, whose duty it is to enable manufacturers to get raw materials, supplies and transportation facilities.

"At Seraing, near Liége, the great steel firm of Cockerill is working half time under their own managers and giving employment to about 4,000 out of their normal 5,000 men. As this plant cannot go on making arms and ammunition, they are busy with repair work on locomotives, in steel construction, such as bridges, and other occupations permitted by The Hague Conference. Most of the industrial plants and mines around Liége are working and giving employment to from 50 to 75 per cent. of their normal number.

"The coal district of Charleroi, where are sixteen out of the twenty-two million tons of Belgian annual coal production, contains forty-eight mines. All of these are working and produce 73 per cent. of normal. As compared with 67,000 employes in peace, 58,000 are now at work. One property, Fontaine Lévecque, is producing more coal than before the war. They pay 6.19 francs per day, as compared to 5.65 francs in 1915. The pay-roll for March, 1916, was over 200,000 francs, which keeps many men and their families from starving."

WILSON'S WORD TO BERLIN.

Entire American People Back of Him, So Nippert Quotes Him.

When Alfred K. Nippert of Cincinnati, a Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Hamilton County, went to Germany last Spring to see how the money raised in this country for relief work in East Prussia was being spent, he carried a personal message from President Wilson to the statesmen at the helm in Berlin to the effect that, while the President never had doubted the honesty of the Imperial Chancellor and the Secretary of State, they must understand that he had the entire American people back of him in his controversy with the German Government over submarine warfare, according to a statement made by the Cincinnati jurist before the City Club of his home city Saturday, and reported in a special dispatch to the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung.

In his talk to the City Club, Judge Nippert is quoted as saying:

"The President assured me that he had full confidence in the German Imperial Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg, and Secretary of State von Jagow. I am saying this for the first time in public, although I was in no wise enjoined to keep silent. I didn't want to say anything about it before election, in order not to arouse the suspicion that I was trying to use the President's words either for or against him during the campaign. The President said to me, word for word:

"'Please tell the gentlemen in Berlin that I have never for a moment doubted the sincerity of the Chancellor or of the Secretary of State. But the gentlemen must also understand, and interpret my note to Berlin and my message to Congress accordingly, that I represent the opinion of the American people, and that I have the entire American people back of me.'"

MERCIER PASTORAL DECRIES PACIFISM

Letter Previously Suppressed Exhorts the Belgians to Prayer and Patience.

HAS PITY FOR POLAND

Tells His People She Has Suffered Even More Than Belgium—A Prayer for Armenians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Cardinal Mercier issued on the first Sunday of October a pastoral letter regarding which nothing has hitherto been known outside the German military lines, except what could be gathered from the comments of the German press. These chiefly dealt with the Cardinal's appeal on behalf of the Armenians.

A copy of the pastoral reached Catholic headquarters in London. It is a notable addition to the series of striking documents which have come from the pen of the Cardinal Archbishop of Malines, since the beginning of the war. Much of it requires to be read with remembrance of the fact that clear language would probably have led the German military authorities to veto its being read in the churches of the archdiocese. Between the lines, however, the Cardinal's meaning is clear.

The greater part deals with the sufferings entailed by the war from a religious point of view, as trials designed by an inscrutable Providence. Rightly regarded, he says, the two years of war are as nothing compared with eternity, and in order properly to understand the deep meaning of passing events the soul must contemplate the eternal designs of the Creator.

The Cardinal is no believer in the possibility of averting all wars.

"Wars," he writes, "should not disturb the peace of mankind. In the original design of Providence the passions were subject to reason and should never be raised as an obstacle to the concord of families or nations; but sin disturbed this generous plan, and in its steps disorder entered history. Pride and cupidity disturb the equilibrium. Their repression and defense against them by arms are necessary to the reestablishment of equilibrium.

"Wars have become inevitable, and so long as there shall remain on earth men guilty of allowing passion to dominate reason universal pacifism will be a chimera. Nay, more, to desire peace for the sake of peace, peace at any price, would be to accept with equal indifference right and injustice, truth and falsehood. It would be cowardice and impiety."

After this remarkable passage the Cardinal studies how to profit by "our affliction and the crimes which occasioned it." Mankind, he says, is guilty of sin and needs to die in order to live again. In such measure as the Belgian people will take to heart these austere teachings will it find the two tragic years it has gone through the foundation from which to spring forward to a more vigorous future.

The Cardinal appeals to his flock to "make sacrifice of their personal and their national sufferings."

"Be also grateful to God," he writes. "Thank him for having kept safe for our love our King, the glory of the Belgian nation, our sweet and strong Queen and the royal children. Return thanks to God for having given us patience to endure without weakness and without murmur our long and arduous trial; for having accorded us the highest benediction of the Holy Father, Pope Benedict, and for having inspired him to say to us that his warmest paternal affection is for Belgium; for having put into the hearts of foreign nations respect for our misfortunes. We shall after the war have to erect a monument of gratitude to them. Meanwhile let us give them the place of honor in our grateful piety."

The Cardinal then beseeches prayers for "our dear fatherland, our valiant prisoners and interned, and our dear refugees." In regard to these last he has some passages of pathetic comfort, suggesting that excuses for the weakness of some of them may easily be found.

"We cannot," he adds with fine irony, "exclude anybody from our prayers—not even our enemies. But Christian theology teaches us to graduate our affections. 'Love with predilection,' says St. Thomas, 'your neighbor, your compatriots, and those who are good to you.' Let us pray, first of all, for our dear soldiers. Let us not separate from them their wives and mothers, silent heroines in our great European drama. Pray for our armies, who to the west and east and south [a geographical subtlety to be noted] are fighting with so much courage and tenacity for our common cause. Let me recommend to you especially our priests who are military Chaplains or ambulance men. May their ministry be fruitful; may they traverse dangers without harm and return to us pious and strong."

The Cardinal next beseeches prayers for the Armenians, of whom "Mussulman fanaticism has put to death thousands upon thousands in the course of the present war and made slaves of their wives and daughters; also for Poland, which never attempted a war of conquest, but always fought for the liberty of peoples and for civilization. She is suffering more than we. Her sons are scattered in Russian, Austrian, and German Armies. Her soil has been ravaged by the flux and reflux of armies. America cannot feed her. Pray for her, and pray that at least one of the happy results of this horrible war may be the definite recognition of the independence of Poland."

"And to the very end," he writes in vibrant conclusion, "let us all remain patient and persevering. Be of good heart [haut les ceurs.] Be more than ever confident. Cry: 'O God, come to mine aid! Lord, hasten to succor me'; and meanwhile be calm and courageous and utter not a murmur. Apply to our patriotic endurance what the Saviour said of the work of eternal salvation: 'He who persevereth unto the end, he shall be saved.'"

WOULDN'T HEAR AMERICANS.

Germans Refused to Listen to Columbian's Sailors.

CORUNNA, Spain, Nov. 14, (via Paris.)—When the crew of the American steamer Columbian landed here they told stories of the attack on their ship, which was sunk off the Spanish coast by a German submarine.

They say that at one time six American seamen got into a boat and went with a petty officer to the submarine with the object of explaining that the Columbian was an American ship. They were not allowed to explain, but were ordered to take on board a German officer and two sailors, which the boat did, and carried them to the Columbian.

The Germans placed in the interior of the ship two bombs, and in the meantime the German officer ordered Captain Curtis and his crew to abandon ship and go aboard the Balto, which was standing by.

Germany to Limit War Profits.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (via London.)—According to the Tageblatt, a circular of the War Ministry was discussed on the Bourse yesterday proposing the limitation of the profits of companies making war supplies to 10 per cent. above the cost of production.

BEAUMONT TAKEN IN A SINGLE RUSH

British Found Practically No Germans Until They Reached Fourth Trench Line.

VILLAGES ARE SWEPT AWAY

Many Prisoners Refused to Fight at All—Tommies Hunt Others Like Rabbits.

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY ON THE SOMME, Monday, Nov. 13, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Yesterday, in the few hours during which the weather was clear, it was possible to see Beaumont-Hamel, or the place where it used to stand, tucked behind its hill, to the north of the Ancre. Today those who will may walk through it and note how, after the bombardment of July the village was made into one of the strongest points upon the German line. For Beaumont-Hamel is now British and with it the German positions that sprawled across nearly five miles of ground upon both banks of the little Ancre. The British are in Beaucourt and fighting is still going on there. Prisoners by the hundred and thousand have already been hurried back to the rear, and there are more to come.

The wrack of the battle of the Somme, which flickered and flared like a failing flame, has burned up again. Neither weather nor mud nor Ludendorff's new divions could smother it. It shone steady and brilliant as a lamp lighting the road to the Rhine.

This battle front in its general contour extended from the eastern end of the recently conquered position in Stuff Trench where it joins the Regina to the old mill road and its nameless bridge across the tiny river, north of Thiepval. Thence it tended north, swinging round the cemetery of Beaumont-Hamel, and continuing to a point north of the northern outskirts of Beaumont-Hamel, a line of five miles. The British objectives included that formidable tangle of trenches and communications, the most complicated and elaborate that has yet come into existence on this front, which the Germans constructed to either flank of Beaumont-Hamel.

Several Days of Shelling.

For some days past Beaumont-Hamel and the line generally at its strong points and salient knots have been treated to short bursts of intense fire by the big British guns.

Nothing has been found to puzzle the Germans more. It is not a barrage, and it is more than the routine shelling, which is a part of every day's work. It does a good deal of damage and nothing follows it—or perhaps something does. It may be the preparation for an attack, it may be just a spasm of war. It keeps the German's attention, causes him fatiguing labor with the spade in repairing what the great shells have damaged.

Beaumont-Hamel got its share. The miserable little village, so long a target of the vast British artillery of great guns and great trench mortars, which smeared its houses and trees in ash upon the mud of their uptorn foundations, was shelled afresh.

Yesterday there was serious shelling, not mere bursts, but mathematically precise and calculated searching of the whole line.

This morning before daylight the barrage fire began. The front was a wide one, therefore care was taken to see that the artillery preparation for the attack was complete. Over each sector the creeping barrage, that wall of shells that walks over the ground in giant strides, moved deliberately. The standing barrage, that tramples upon the enemy's parapet as one treads on a worm cast on the lawn, boiled along the trenches, making a rampart of leaping black smoke with sudden flame showing within it. And over both there sped a searching fire of high explosive shells and shrapnel that groped in the Germans' rear among their communications and establishments.

The guns did their work as guns never fail to do it. One needs to be the German crouching in a twenty-foot dugout while the bombardment waxes overhead and the open ground is a flaming Gehenna where nothing can live, to realize quite what that work is. To see it at a distance from behind the guns or from beneath the ear-rending roof of the barrage tells one nothing of what is happening upon that awful line where great yellow shells are arriving.

Homes and villages are plastered abroad upon the charred ground, fields are made to eddy and froth like water under the millwheel in the thresh of explosions—these one can see through. It is if the gunner took Creation for a canvas and painted chaos upon it.

The attack began shortly after 6 o'clock and forthwith upon the centre Beaumont-Hamel was carried almost with a single rush that took the British troops across the village and out to the sloping ground beyond where the road to Beaucourt winds down toward the Ancre. The land rises upon the north, where a broad swell of hill lifts between Beaumont-Hamel and Serre, and to this, too, they thrust forward, carrying all positions until they established themselves well up on the side of the rise where forthwith they dug themselves in successfully under a heavy fire.

At these points the attack had the success of surprise. According to some of the wounded who have come up from the fight there were no Germans at all in the first trench that they reached. At any rate it was held very weakly. The attackers found the first strong forces against them only in the fourth trench, where the men who had escaped from the advanced positions through the tangle of intricate communication trenches had gathered. Here there was brisk fighting, for the British went in with the momentum of victory already assured, with the ground gained behind them. The bombers went through like hounds unleashed, and it was only some minutes before Ludendorff's newest division was "kamerading" itself out of danger.

Many Refused to Fight.

A very large number of the prisoners are men who never stood to the attack at all. From some trenches they came running forth with hands upheld to meet the attack. The new division conjured out of Ludendorff's capacious sleeve by trimming other divisions down and gleaning among his men of 47 and boys of 17, proved to be new only in a sense. It had a new number and new identity as a unit. The members of it were to be seen today coming up to the prisoners' cages with their cavalry escort riding beside and behind them—Germans of the most obvious old soldier type.

Of Beaumont-Hamel itself there remained nothing. It was leveled. As in Pozières, as in Bazentin, as in a dozen other villages over which the tidal wave of battle has rolled. There was not so much as a house nor the signs of a place on which a house had stood.

The villagers who come back after the Germans are driven far enough east to make life possible and safe on the Ancre will be hard put to it to find so much as a heap of bricks, for bricks fly to dust in the shelling as these places have suffered. But under it twenty and thirty feet below the surface a new village had come into being. Here was a labyrinth of great dugouts for the troops, lavishly excavated beneath the roots of the village, finished with that painstaking thoroughness which is characteristic of all German war work. The men could shelter here while the shells of the barrage danced their demoniac saraband above their heads safe from the greatest shell that ever stabbed the ground into a crater and emerge at their moment to man the positions against an infantry attack.

Some 600 prisoners (but none of these figures is conclusive; there are always more to come) the British collected out of these vaults. War is becoming too hard for the common run of men. The Germans who surrendered had endured hours of such shelling as no words written upon paper can convey the horror of. They came to captivity, to comfortable, well-fed, easy-disciplined captivity in British hands as men go to deliverance.

Among the first of the captives to put his hands up was a noncommissioned officer. He took a minute or two to make sure he was safe, that British Kultur was not developed to the point of cold-bloodedly slaughtering prisoners, and then his rank and office began to inflate him again.

The British troops were endeavoring to make a herd of captured Germans understand by the old device of talking pidgin English at the top of their voices when he intervened. With the German parade rasp in his voice—the Prussian sawmill tone—he set to work to organize his men into stretcher parties to carry back the wounded to the British lines.

The positions to the south and across the Ancre were carried with equal success. The line gained traverses at one point the outskirts of Beaucourt, another village that was. At some places the attack went forward so quickly that "pockets" of Germans were overlooked and remain still in their little doomed strongholds, whence they are being hunted out methodically. At Beaucourt the fighting continues.

British Failed in North.

The pockets or small groups of Germans who came up from deep dugouts after the British had gone on were particularly troublesome in the northern portion of the fight. At several points here they opened on the British troops from behind with machine guns which they had brought up with them from their burrows, and at the extreme north the machine gun problem made it impossible to make and hold the line attacked.

But the machine guns were in general less troublesome than is usually the case. Infantry have no answer to a well-posted gun, as we saw at the Butte de Warlencourt last week, and during many earlier weeks, too, but at many places either there were no machine guns or the preliminary bombardment had found them and suppressed them. At any rate, there are wounded men who say that throughout the fight they never heard once that rat-tat-tat, quickening to a snarl, which is the token of a machine gun swinging its invisible scythe at a standing crop of attackers.

Drop Wreath and Letters, Which Are Sent to Airman's Parents.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (via Sayville.)—A wreath and two letters from the Royal British Flying Corps have been handed to the parents of Captain Boelke, the noted air fighter, who was killed recently at the front in France, says the Overseas News Agency, which describes the sending of these testimonials as follows:

"A British airman dropped a package behind our lines with two letters. One of the letters bore the inscription: 'In memory of Captain Boelke, our brave and chivalrous adversary. The Royal British Flying Corps.'

"The other letter runs: 'To the Officers of the German Flying Corps on this Front: We hope that you will find this wreath and are sorry that it comes so late. The weather prevented us from sending it earlier. We mourn with Captain Boelke's parents and friends. We all recognize his bravery. Kind regards to Captain Evan and Lieutenant Long, of the Moran Squadron.

Full Text of the Note.

Ambassador Page's letter forwarding the note and the text of the communication are as follows:

Ambassador W. H. Page to the Secretary of State.

American Embassy, London, Oct. 12, 1916.

Sir: With reference to the department's telegram, No. 3,578, of July 26, 1916, 10 P. M., and to my telegram, No. 5,003, of the 11th inst., I have the honor to inclose herewith a printed copy of a note I have received from the Foreign Office concerning the Trading with the Enemy act.

I have, &c.,
WALTER HINES PAGE.

The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to Ambassador W. H. Page.

Foreign Office, Oct. 10, 1916.

Your Excellency: His Majesty's Government have had under consideration the note which your Excellency was good enough to communicate to me on the 28th July last, with respect to the addition of certain firms in the United States of America to the statutory list compiled and issued in accordance with "the Trading with the Enemy (extension of powers) act, 1915."

2. You will recall that shortly after this act became law I had the honor, in my note of the 16th February last, in reply to your note of the 26th January, to explain the object of the act. It is a piece of purely municipal legislation, and provides that his Majesty may by proclamation prohibit persons in the United Kingdom from trading with any persons in foreign countries who might be specified in such proclamations or in any subsequent orders. It also imposes appropriate penalties upon persons in the United Kingdom who violate the provisions of this statute.

3. That is all. His Majesty's Government neither purport nor claim to impose any disabilities or penalties upon neutral individuals or upon neutral commerce. The measure is simply one which enjoins those who owe allegiance to Great Britain to cease having trade relations with persons who are found to be assisting or rendering service to the enemy.

Surprised at Our Stand.

4. I can scarcely believe that the United States Government intend to challenge the right of Great Britain as a sovereign State to pass legislation prohibiting all those who owe her allegiance from trading with any specified persons when such prohibition is found necessary in the public interest. The right to do so is so obvious that I feel sure that the protest which your Excellency handed to me has been founded on a misconception of the scope and intent of the measures which have been taken.

5. This view is strengthened by some of the remarks which are made in the note. It is, for instance, stated that these measures are "inevitably and essentially inconsistent with the rights of the citizens of all nations not involved in war.' The note then proceeds to point out that citizens of the United States are entirely within their rights in attempting to trade with any of the nations now at war. His Majesty's Government readily admit that the citizens of every neutral nation are free to trade with belligerent countries. The United States Government will no doubt equally readily admit that they do so, subject to the right of the other belligerent to put an end to that trade by every means within his power which is recognized by international law, by such measures, for instance, as the seizure of neutral goods as contraband, or for breach of blockade, &c. The legislation, however, to which exception is taken does not belong to that class of measures. It is purely municipal. It is an exercise of the sovereign right of an independent State over its own citizens and nothing more. This fact has not, I feel sure, been fully realized by the Government of the United States of America, for the note maintains that the Government cannot consent to see these remedies and penalties altered and extended at will in derogation of the right of its citizens; and says that "conspicuous among the principles which the civilized nations of the world have accepted for the safeguarding of the rights of neutrals is the just and honorable principle that neutrals may not be condemned nor their goods confiscated, except upon fair adjudication and after an opportunity to be heard in prize courts or elsewhere."

No Property Interference.

6. As I have said above, the legislation merely prohibits persons in the United Kingdom from trading with certain specified individuals, who by reason of their nationality or their association are found to support the cause of the enemy, and trading with whom will therefore strengthen that cause. So far as that legislation is concerned, no rights or property of these specified individuals are interfered with; neither they nor their property are condemned or confiscated; they are as free as they were before to carry on their business. The only disability they suffer is that British subjects are prohibited from giving to them the support and assistance of British credit and British property.

7. The steps which his Majesty's Government are taking under the above-mentioned act are not confined to the United States of America; the policy is being pursued in all neutral countries. Nay, more, With the full consent of the Allied Governments, firms, even in Allied countries, are being placed on the statutory list if they are firms with whom it is necessary to prevent British subjects from trading. These considerations may, perhaps, serve to convince the Government of the United States that the measures, now being taken, are not directed against neutral trade in general. Still less are they directed against American trade in particular; they are part of the general belligerent operations designed to weaken the enemy's resources.

8. I do not read your note of the 28th July as maintaining that his Majesty's Government are obliged by any rule of international law to give to those, who are actively assisting the cause of their enemies, whether they be established in neutral or in enemy territory, the facilities which flow from participation in British commerce. Any such proposition would be so manifestly untenable that there is no reason to refute it. The feelings, which, I venture to think, have prompted the note under reply must have been that the measures which we have been obliged to take will be expanded to an extent which will result in their interfering with genuine neutral commerce; perhaps, also, that they are not exclusively designed for belligerent purposes, but are rather an attempt to forward our own trade interests at the expense of neutral commerce, under the cloak of belligerency; and, lastly, that they are, from a military point of view, unnecessary.

May Extend the List.

9. Upon these points I am able to give to the Government and people of the United States the fullest assurances. Upon the first point, it is true, as your note says, that the name of a firm may be added to the statutory list of persons with whom British persons may not trade whenever, on account of the enemy association of such firm, it seems expedient to do so. But the Government of the United States can feel confident that this system of prohibitions will not be carried further than is absolutely necessary. It has been forced upon us by the circumstances of the present war. To extend it beyond what is required in order to secure its immediate purpose—the weakening of the resources of our opponents—or to allow it to interfere with what is really the genuine neutral trade of a country with which we desire to have the closest commercial intercourse, would be contrary to British interests.

The advantage derived from a commercial transaction between a British subject and a foreigner is mutual, and for his Majesty's Government to forbid a British subject to trade with the citizen of any foreign country necessarily entails some diminution of commercial opportunity for that British subject, and therefore some loss both to him and to his country.

Consequently the United States Government, even if they are willing to ignore the whole tradition and tendency of British policy toward the commerce of other nations, might be confident that self-interest alone would render his Majesty's Government anxious not to place upon the statutory list the name of any firm which carries on a genuine bona fide neutral trade. If they did so, Great Britain herself would be the loser.

10. As to the second point, there seem to be individuals in the United States and elsewhere whom it is almost impossible to convince that the measures we take are measures against our enemies and not intended merely to foster our own trade at the expense of that of neutral countries. I can only reiterate what has been repeatedly explained before, that his Majesty's Government have no such unworthy object in view. We have, in fact, in all the steps we have taken to prevent British subjects from trading with these specified firms, been most careful to cause the least possible dislocation of neutral trade, as much in our interests as in those of the neutral.

11. I turn now to the question whether the circumstances of the present war are such as to justify resort on the part of his Majesty's Government to this novel expedient.

12. As the United States Government are well aware, the Anglo-American practice has in times past been to treat domicile as the test of enemy character, in contradistinction to the Continental practice, which has always regarded nationality as the test. The Anglo-American rule crystallized at the time when means of transport and communication were less developed than now, and when in consequence the actions of a person established in a distant country could have but little influence upon a struggle.

Hits at Germans Here.

13. Today the position is very different. The activities of enemy subjects are ubiquitous, and under modern conditions it is easy for them, wherever resident, to remit money to any place where it may be required for the use of their own Government, or to act in other ways calculated to assist its purposes and to damage the interests of the powers with whom it is at war. No elaborate exposition of the situation is required to show that full use has been and is being made of these opportunities.

14. The experience of the war has proved abundantly, as the United States Government will readily admit, that many Germans in neutral countries have done all in their power to help the cause of their own country, and to injure that of the Allies; in fact, it would be no exaggeration to say that German houses abroad have in a large number of cases been used as an integral part of an organization, deliberately conceived and planned as an engine for the furtherance of German political and military ambitions.

It is common knowledge that German business establishments in foreign countries have been not merely centres of German trade, but active agents for the dissemination of German political and social influence, and for the purpose of espionage. In some cases they have even been used as bases of supply for German cruisers, and in other cases as organizers and paymasters of miscreants employed to destroy by foul means factories engaged in making, or ships engaged in carrying, supplies required by the Allies.

Such operations have been carried out in the territory even of the United States itself, and I am bound to observe, what I do not think will be denied, that no adequate action has yet been taken by the Government of the United States to suppress breaches of neutrality of this particularly criminal kind, which I know that they are the first to discountenance and deplore.

15. In the face of enemy activities of this nature it was essential for his Majesty's Government to take steps that should at least deprive interests, so strongly hostile, of the facilities and advantages of unrestricted trading with British subjects. The public opinion of this country would not have tolerated the prolongation of the war by the continued liberty of British subjects to trade with and so to enrich the firms in foreign countries whose wealth and influence were alike at the service of the enemy.

16. Let me repeat that his Majesty's Government make no such claim to dictate to citizens of the United States, nor to those of any other neutral country, as to the persons with whom they are or are not to trade. They do, however, maintain the right, which in the present crisis is also their duty towards the people of this country and to their allies, to withhold British facilities from those who conduct their trade for the benefit of our enemies. If the value to these firms of British facilities is such as to lead them to prefer to give up their trade with our enemies rather than to run the risk of being deprived of such facilities, his Majesty's Government can not admit that their acceptance of guarantees to that effect is either arbitrary or incompatible with international law or comity.

17. There is another matter with which I should like to deal.

18. The idea would seem to be prevalent in some quarters that the military position is now such that it is unnecessary for his Majesty's Government to take any steps which might prejudice, even to a slight extent, the commerce of neutral countries, that the end of the war is in sight, and that nothing which happens in distant neutral countries can affect the ultimate result.

End of War Not in Sight.

19. If that were really the position, it is possible that the measures taken by his Majesty's Government might be described as uncalled for, but it is not. We may well wish that it were so. Even though the military situation of the Allies has greatly improved, there is still a long and bitter struggle in front of them, and one which in justice to the principles for which they are fighting imposes upon them the duty of employing every opportunity and every measure which they can legitimately use to overcome their opponents.

20. One observation which is very commonly heard is that certain belligerent acts, even though lawful, are too petty to have any influence upon a struggle of such magnitude. It is, I know, difficult for those who have no immediate contact with war to realize with what painful anxiety men and women in this country must regard even the smallest acts which tend to increase, if only by a hair's breadth, the danger in which their relatives and friends daily stand, or to prolong, if only by a minute, the period during which they are to be exposed to such perils.

21. Whatever inconvenience may be caused to neutral nations by the exercise of belligerent rights, it is not to be compared for an instant to the suffering and loss occasioned to mankind by the prolongation of the war, even for a week.

Barring Use of Ships.

22. One other matter should be mentioned, namely, the exclusion from ships using British coal of goods belonging to firms on the statutory list. This is enforced by rendering it a condition of the supply of bunker coal. What legal objection can be taken to this course? It is British coal; why should it be used to transport the goods of those who are actively assisting our enemies? Nor is this the only point. It must be remembered that the German Government by their submarine warfare have sought to diminish the world's tonnage; they have sunk illegally and without warning hundreds of peaceful merchant ships, belonging not only to allied countries but to neutrals as well. Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, Dutch, Spanish, Greek ships, have all been sunk. Between June 1 and Sept. 30, 1916, 262 vessels have been sunk by enemy submarines; 73 of these were British, 123 allied, and 66 neutrals. These totals included ten British vessels which were sunk without warning and involved the loss of eighty-one lives; two allied, one of which involved the loss of two lives, no information being available as to the other, and three neutral, involving a loss of one life. Even so, the list is incomplete. Probably other vessels were sunk without warning and more lives than those enumerated were lost. It may be added that where those on board did escape it was, as a rule, only by taking to open boats.

23. One of the first enterprises to feel the loss of tonnage has been the Commission of Relief in Belgium. Relief ships have themselves been repeatedly sunk, and in spite of all the efforts of his Majesty's Government, in spite of the special facilities given for the supply of coal to ships engaged in the commission's service, that body is constantly unable to import into Belgium the foodstuffs absolutely necessary to preserve the life of the population. Can it then be wondered that the British Government are anxious to limit the supply of British coal in such a way as to reserve it as far as possible to ships genuinely employed in allied or neutral trade?

Recalls Civil War.

24. There is, indeed, one preoccupation in regard to this use of coaling advantages by his Majesty's Government which is, no doubt, present in the minds of neutrals, and which I recognize. I refer to the apprehension that the potential control over means of transportation, thus possessed by one nation, might be used for the disruption of the trade of the world in the selfish interests of that nation.

His Majesty's Government, therefore, take this opportunity to declare that they are not unmindful of the obligations of those who possess sea power, nor of that traditional policy pursued by the British Empire by which such power has been regarded as a trust and has been exercised in the interests of freedom. They require no representations to recall such considerations to mind, but they cannot admit that, in the circumstances of the times their present use of their coal resources, a use which only differs in extent from that exercised by the United States in the civil war in the case of vessels proceeding to such ports as Nassau, is obnoxious to their duties or their voluntary professions.

25. In conclusion, I cannot refrain from calling to mind the instructions issued by Lord Russell on July 5, 1862, to the merchants of Liverpool in regard to trade with the Bahamas. His Lordship there advised British subjects that their "true remedy" would be to "refrain from this species of trade" on the ground that "it exposes innocent commerce to vexatious detention and search by American cruisers."

26. His Majesty's Government do not ask the Government of the United States to take any such action as this, but they cannot believe that the United States Government will question their right to lay upon British merchants, in the interests of the safety of the British Empire, for which they are responsible, the same prohibitions as Lord Russell issued fifty years ago out of consideration for the interests and feelings of a foreign nation. Suspicions and insinuations which would construe so simple an action as an opening for secret and unavowed designs on neutral rights should have no place in the relations between two friendly countries.

27. I trust that the explanations contained in this note will destroy such suspicions and correct the erroneous views which prevail in the United States on the subject.

BRITISH PUSH ON UP ANCRE VALLEY

ing them, laid down their arms. According to this correspondent, the average depth of front penetrated by the British is 1,000 to 1,200 yards.

CAPTURED AND ATE GERMANS' BREAKFAST

British Attack on the Ancre Came as a Surprise to Defenders—Little Success Near Serre.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Nov. 13, (via London, 14.)—The Germans were apparently completely surprised by this (Monday) morning's attack in the valley of the Ancre. An evidence of this was found in the fact that the garrison of the trenches around Beaumont-Hamel were preparing for breakfast at the very moment when the British infantry stormed the position. The British, after partially clearing the underground galleries and rounding up 700 prisoners, proceeded to eat their prisoners' breakfast, telling the captives that they would be fed when they arrived within the British lines.

A total of nearly 4,000 prisoners has so far been sent to the cages, including a regimental commander, who was captured in a dugout with a Major, and Adjutant, and a number of other officers. The majority of the prisoners are Silesians and, according to the British officers, very inferior fighting material. The German higher command depended apparently on the supposedly impregnable character of the old front line and its strongly fortified villages rather than on the stamina of the troops. The British officers believe that the Germans withdrew their best men for service elsewhere on the British front where the new and shallower positions to which the defenders have been forced demand greater resisting power on the part of the infantry.

The British losses were unusually light owing largely to the unexpectedly feeble character of the German machine gun fire at Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Divion. Large numbers of German dead were found strewn on the wrecked trenches of the original main line. This line consisted of four parallel roads of trenches, the last being flush with the western face of Beaumont-Hamel.

For some days past the sector attacked today and the area behind have been subjected to successive bombardments, which rose to a record pitch yesterday and resulted in the demolition of a large part of the defenses. The garrison accepted the morning's deluge of shells as part of the usual daily program and did not fully realize their danger until the British infantry was seen approaching in the darkness.

The British advance north of Beaumont-Hamel was held up on a front about 1,000 yards west of Serre. The first detachment captured some German trenches and passed eastward toward the village. Suddenly hidden machine guns and infantry snipers, scattered in great profusion in the craters and other shelters, began firing in the backs of the attacking troops, and necessitated their withdrawal. North of Serre the British gained ground, but, owing to the failure of the advance immediately south, the position is subjected to an enfilading fire from higher ground in the neighborhood of the village.

A number of isolated pockets are being cleared of Germans in the intervening ground between Beaumont-Hamel and Beaucourt-sur-Ancre. The British are firmly established on the western outskirts of the latter hamlet. The remaining fragments of the old German line immediately south of the Ancre, which were "pinched out" by the British flank pivoting to the northeast around the elbow of the stream, had been partially isolated since the capture of Schwaben redoubt. Three hundred Germans, the only survivors of the bombardment, were captured in this extensive system of riverside caves. Prior to the attack the only communication between these caves and the German rear was by a causeway across the Ancre, which could only be traversed at night.

GERMAN SUCCESS IN AIR.

Berlin Says Allies Lost 104 Airplanes in October, Teutons 17.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—In the month of October the Entente Allies lost 104 airplanes on the Western, Eastern, and Balkan fronts, while the Germans lost seventeen machines, according to today's official German statement. The text reads:

With great success in the month of October our flying forces fulfilled their heavy and variegated task, especially in the Western war theatre. Special acknowledgment and thanks are deserved by the observation fliers of the artillery and infantry. They were protected by the battle airplanes, which also splendidly fulfilled their special tasks and by the anti-aircraft guns.

We lost seventeen airplanes. Our enemies in the West, in the East and in the Balkans lost 104 airplanes, eighty-three of them in air fights, fifteen shot down from the ground, and six by being forced to land behind our lines. Sixty hostile airplanes are in our possession. Forty-four machines were seen to fall down on the other side of the lines.

TEUTONS ADVANCE ON RUMANIAN FRONT

Take Bumbeshti, South of Vulcan Pass, and 655 Prisoners in Red Tower Pass.

REOCCUPY GYERGYO HILLS

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Desperate efforts are being made by the Austrian and German forces under General von Falkenhayn to break through the Rumanian defense on the Transylvanian front and in the region of Orsova, on the Danube, in Hungary, near the Rumanian border, where, Reuter's Bucharest correspondent reports, powerful Teutonic reinforcements have been sent in the hope of recapturing the town and re-establishing communications with Bulgaria by way of the river, which now is commanded by the Rumanian guns. On the Transylvanian Mountain front the invaders, it is admitted officially, have captured the village of Bumbeshti, in the Jiul Valley, south of Vulcan Pass, and have also forced the Rumanians back in the Alt Valley.

Following is the Russian official account of these operations:

In Transylvania attacks of the enemy in the Trotus, Oituz, and Tirgujiuly Valleys have been repulsed. in the Alt Valley the enemy's persistent attacks succeeded in forcing back the Rumanian troops slightly. In the Jiul Valley the enemy has taken possession of the village of Bumbeshti.

The situation in Dobrudja is unchanged.

The Rumanian official report reads:

On the western frontier of Moldavia, in the Trotus and Uzul Valleys our artillery silenced enemy guns. Between the Uzul Valley and the valley of the River Casin the enemy has attacked without interruption from Oct. 29 until today. All his attacks have been repulsed in sanguinary manner. We counterattacked and captured two officers, eighty-one men, three machine guns, and some war material.

From the Putna Valley to Predelus there is nothing of importance to report, apart from artillery bombardments and minor engagements. In the Prahova Valley there has been an intense artillery bombardment.

In the region of Dragosiavele the enemy attacked with infantry and heavy artillery, compelling our troops to give way on the left wing. On the right bank of the Alt the enemy violently attacked positions which changed hands several times and finally, by employing fresh troops of superior numbers, made progress. After desperate struggles our troops were compelled to withdraw to the south of Bumbeshti.

There have been artillery, patrol, and infantry actions along the Cerna (Southern Transylvania.)

On the southern front, along the Danube, there were no developments. The situation in Dobrudja is unchanged.

Our flotilla arrived yesterday at Selmeni (on the Danube north of Cernavoda) and bombarded the enemy's left flank.

BERLIN, Nov. 14., (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Russian forces have retired from the Gyergyo Mountains, in Northern Transylvania, to the Rumanian frontier as a result of German and Austro-Hungarian attacks, says today's German official statement. To the south of Tulghes Pass, the statement adds, Bavarian and Austro-Hungarian battalions made progress despite the tenacious defense of the Rumanians. The text of the statement reads:

Eastern War Theatre, Front of Prince Leopold—There were no important engagements.

Front of Archduke Charles—Northeast of Jakobeny, in the forest of the Carpathians, Russian detachments were chased from the front of our positions by our fire.

The Russians retired from the Gyergyo Mountains to the frontier on account of attacks made by German and Austro-Hungarian troops.

To the south of Tulghes Pass Bavarian and Austro-Hungarian battalions made progress in spite of tenacious defense.

On both sides of Oituz Pass yesterday there were minor engagements for some heights.

On the Transylvania south front the engagements continue successful for us. An additional several hundred prisoners were made. At Rothenthurm Pass six officers and 650 men were captured.

Front of Field Marshal von Mackensen, (Dobrudja.)—There is nothing new to report. Austro-Hungarian monitors once more gave proof of their efficiency by bringing in after an engagement near the Rumanian bank of the Danube, in the vicinity of Giurgiu, seven boats of a tow, of which five were laden with cargo.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—A dispatch to the Temps from Saloniki says:

"It is semi-officially announced from Sofia that the Bulgarian Government will take over the administration of the Dobrudja region of Rumania, consequent upon an agreement with the Central Empires recognizing Burgarian sovereignty over the occupied region."

Denies Damage to German Raiders.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The German torpedo boats that made a raid in the Gulf of Finland on Nov. 11 did not encounter any hostile craft, nor was there any fog prevalent at the time to hinder pursuit by the Russians, says the Overseas News Agency today, quoting "competent German authority" to this effect. The statement is made in view of the Russian report that the majority of the German craft were sunk by the Russians, who had to abandon pursuit, it was stated, because of dense fog.

PLEDGES BRITAIN TO PEACE IDEALS

Lord Bryce Declares American Co-operation Is Essential After the War.

PRAISES ELECTION SPIRIT

Admires "the Dignity and Moderation of Language" During the Presidential Campaign.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Another step in the direction of the objects aimed at by the League to Enforce Peace, of which ex-President Taft is President, was taken today at a meeting of the Mayflower Club, where Lord Bryce presided over a representative gathering.

Last August London dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES indicated that the British Government took a favorable view of the proposals of which President Wilson had expressed approval, and Viscount Grey since then has spoken officially on the subject.

An effort was recently made by two little known members of Parliament to identify an English society still less known with the proposals of the league, but the letter which they addressed to The London Times met, generally speaking, with unfavorable comment, chiefly on the ground that Englishmen's main duty at present was to "get on with the war."

Today's meeting was of a very different character and importance. It was a really serious effort to begin the creation of public sentiment, without which the British Government could not expect to carry through a policy of the kind outlined by the League to Enforce Peace.

Lord Bryce, in a carefully considered speech, emphasized the fact that the present war must be prosecuted until German militarism was crushed, but said that after that American assistance in safeguarding the peace of the world would be eminently desirable.

Admires Spirit of Our Election.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Lord Bryce, the former British Ambassador to the United States, and Professor Gilbert Murray of Oxford were the principal speakers today at a meeting of the Mayflower Club, which is composed of British and Americans and has as its object the perpetuation of the memory of the Pilgrims. The meetings were held in the reception room of the House of Commons, and among those present was the American Ambassador, Walter H. Page.

Referring to the Presidential election in the United States, Lord Bryce said:

"All that would be fitting to say here is that we admire the tranquility and perfect order with which such a gigantic piece of work as the casting of a vote over a whole continent has been conducted, and we admire no less the dignity and moderation of language displayed during the exciting contest by the two candidates, both men conspicuous for their ability and force of character.

"Questions as to the exercise of belligerent rights have always arisen, and must always be expected to arise, between belligerents and neutrals in naval war. Those that have arisen between the Allies and the United States are happily such as can be disposed of by pacific negotiations, and need not affect the permanent friendship of peoples attached to one another by so many ties. At this moment the friendship of our two nations is of more importance, not only to both of us, but to the world, than perhaps ever before.

"For what is the state of the world? This war has brought upon it more widespread calamities than any previous war. We are asking ourselves whether we must expect such calamities to go on recurring in the future. Is all this suffering to have been vain? After the war will international fears, hatreds, and suspicions return, and will great armaments—a still heavier burden to already impoverished peoples—have again to be maintained?

"The only method suggested for preventing these things is a combination of peace-loving nations to be formed after the war and after the treaty of settlement for the purpose of establishing a permanent peace.

"The simplest way of doing this is to require that every international dispute shall be submitted to arbitration or conciliation before any resort to arms. Such a plan could not be carried out without the co-operation of neutral nations, and especially of the greatest of the neutral nations.

America Can No Longer Stand Apart.

"The United States has hitherto stood apart in isolation, but isolation is no longer possible. Every country is now affected and its safety threatened by the spirit of anti-democratic aggression. The United States has avoided entangling alliances. But a league of peace would be no entangling alliance. It would be a smoothing down and straightening out of difficulties that threaten to embroil the world.

"Already many leading statesmen have proposed such a scheme as I have outlined. Both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes have given it their hearty approval. Public opinion in both parties alike is daily growing in its favor.

"Here in Great Britain we cannot take practical steps till this war has been—as it certainly will be—fought through to a decisive victory. But meantime we may begin to consider what those practical steps should be, and we can assure our willingness to cooperate in a work to which our common ideals turn. We are both peace-loving peoples; we both desire to respect the rights of every nation, small or great. Neither of us seeks to dominate the world either by war or in commerce. We both love freedom, and wish to see it everywhere prevail.

"Let us try to realize these common ideals, and let us consecrate our friendship in an effort to secure for mankind the blessing of an enduring peace."

Professor Gilbert Murray gave a review of the American attitude toward the war as he observed it during a recent visit to the United States. He said that the war would not result in the perpetuation of hatred between the belligerent peoples. He also approved of a league for maintaining peace between nations.

ceived, as all perceive, that until we were fed rational and spiritual processes were impossible. So that the function of the farmer is, so to say, the initial function of life, and in this initial function it is my ambition, as I am sure it is yours, that the farmers of the United States should lead by way of conspicuous example.

"I wish that all problems of Government were displayed in as clear lines of duty as this problem of government with regard to how the farmer ought to be treated is displayed. I wish, for example, that foreign affairs were as simple as agriculture. The great satisfaction about what you have to discuss is that when once our duty is determined, we have got a great force of intelligence to go forward in the line of duty.

"I did not intend when I came here to say as much as I have, or to discourse in the least about agriculture, but I did want to congratulate you upon the opportunity now to study upon a scale as wide as the world the great business in which you are engaged, and to express my very profund interest in the more recent developments of agriculture in the United States which have been converting it from an occupation into a systematic business; which have been introducing the things which make a free country—counsel and co-operation.

"The thing that make a free country vital is the large number of people who get together to do important things without asking the leave of the Government to do them. The striking thing about a great country like the United States is that if the Government neglected everything, the people would do it; that you do not beckon to the people of the United States. They command you to go on, and things that are neglected they have got plenty of brains to get together and do for themselves.

"All these organizations of business men and manufacturers and advertising men and farmers, and everybody else that has the same occupation, are just a great combination of brains to keep alive the whole vital intelligence of the nation. They do not wait on anybody's invitation to do things unpremeditated for them. They illustrate at every turn of what they do the extraordinary vitality of this nation. The farmers have got together long enough, and it is only recently that the country has appreciated just how much it has left to the farmer to do what the Government ought to have done for him. I am very proud to have lived in a time and be affiliated with the Government at a time when these things were becoming manifest, and the duty of the Government toward the farmer was partially performed."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The battle of Ancre Brook, (it is a more exact title than the battle of the Somme when we are considering the British attack of Monday,) as it has been so far reported, is an example of excellent strategy of a local character.

The British lines were astride the brook, the northern wing bending back to the west at the crook in the stream, the southern wing, paralleling almost exactly the stream's course as far south as a point below St. Pierre Divion, where the line broke away abruptly to the east at right angles. The German lines were thus facing almost due west on the north bank, while on the south they faced west for only a half mile and then faced south. The Ancre, which in the bend and for several miles each side of it, is very marshy, and, because of the recent heavy rains, was far out of its banks, is not an unformidable obstacle. The Germans were then fighting with the stream and its wide marsh belt at their backs and but a half mile distant. Discretion would have counseled falling back behind the brook long ago just as the French did at the Brook of Forges during the battle of Verdun. But the Germans are stubborn, have a tendency to belittle and underrate their opponents, and are consequently overconfident of their own powers of resistance. This has been shown a number of times in the course of the battle of the Somme. The Germans have held on too long, have tempted fate, and have lost.

The most striking thing about this attack on the Ancre is the large number of prisoners taken on such a narrow front. It is this phase of the engagement that stamps it as an unusually happy strategic move.

The preliminary artillery bombardment was impartially directed against the lines both north and south of the brook. When the infantry went forward south of the river, moving north, the Germans defending this section of the line were caught in a trap. There is no road leaving the section between the British lines and the brook and running eastward except the one road close along the river to Grandcourt. This road was under the constant and heavy fire of the British artillery, so that its use by the Germans for the purpose of retreat was out of the question. A retreat across the stream was equally impossible. The stream itself, as I have said, offered a great obstacle to such a manoeuvre, and even if it did not the guns of the British north of the river controlled the line of retreat at least half way to Miraumont. The Germans were thus caught in a trap, one jaw of which was the brook and the other the advancing British infantry. It was in this trap that the majority of prisoners were taken.

The fundamental rules of strategy are almost invariable. It is folly to think that because you happen to be intrenched with unusual strength that you can afford to ignore them. The chances are ten to one that if you do you will have to pay the consequences. One of these rules is that your line of retreat should always be open and unobstructed. This is just where the Germans failed, and is the reason why their defeat, as measured by the number of prisoners taken, was so severe. There was no line of retreat. It was totally and absolutely closed, and the gates were barred.

No line is so strong that it cannot be broken. And what is more, if you have the shell, it need not be at an enormous sacrifice in men. The British evidently had the shell. The German reports testify to this. They also have what is of great value in the present fighting, the advantage of the initiative. They can strike wherever their judgment dictates. They have the men, they have the guns. The Germans cannot know where the next blow is to fall, and they cannot man their defenses in sufficient force to guard all sections of their front. The British can, therefore, and do, force a concentration at one point and then strike with unabated force at another. This has become the characteristic of the Somme fighting during the last three weeks.

These sharp thrusts are always accompanied by the element of surprise, which is an important factor. Give the Germans, with their well-known and fully recognized powers of resistance, sufficient time to prepare for the defense of a given position, and without an absolutely overwhelming superiority of artillery, the losses accompanying the taking of sections of their line will be almost prohibitive. When they are surprised at the point of attack, however, as they very evidently were in this last case, it is highly probable that the losses of the offensive are no greater than those of the defense.

The battle of the Ancre is not yet over as shown by the late British report of yesterday, which showed that the British had straightened out their line by the occupation of the small village of Beaucourt and the small angle which was left east of Divion. The town of Grandcourt seems to be the next on the list, and is in a serious position. The British lines on the west are close to the outskirts of the village, and their guns control all the exits from the village toward the north. South of the village these guns can reach the lines both south and east of the town, so that the only protected ground is toward the north.

But Grandcourt is but another step. What the British have in immediate view is Miraumont. Not that this village possesses any unique strategic advantage. It does not. While it is a railroad town, it derives no advantage from this fact. But once in firm possession of Miraumont, a considerable section of what remains of the salient is taken in reverse, in flank, and in front, so that it will not be a particularly hard matter for the British to draw a straight line from Miraumont to Hébuterne and snuff out all that portion of the salient west of that line.

No move which the British have made in the last month has been so full of possibilities as the taking of the turning point of the German line at Divion, and it is certain that the trenches behind will not be so strongly constructed nor capable of so effective a defense.

The French in the meantime have not been idle. The village of Saillisel is completely in their hands. This town, the struggle for which has been so desperate, is of peculiar value. It is the one factor which controls the woods of St. Pierre Vaast. As long as the Germans continued to hold the village the woods were safe. Once the village is firmly in French hands, the woods are turned and the French are in a position to strike at the German lines in the woods from the rear. Later, when the opportunity presents itself, we will see the relation between this situation and Péronne.

ORDERS ELECTIONS FOR A POLISH COUNCIL

German Governor Will Appoint a Third of It and Attend Its Sessions.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—In accordance with the views expressed by all portions of the Polish population that the first step should be taken now in order to make possible their collaboration in the country's government prior to the establishment of their own State, Governor General von Beseler has ordered that an election be held in order to form a State Council, says the Overseas News Agency.

Concerning the participation of the districts of the Kingdom of Poland under Austro-Hungarian administration, an agreement will be reached with competent authorities. In the Government General of Warsaw the elections for the State Council will be held under the following plan:

"In agricultural districts township meetings and in Warsaw and Lodz the Town Councils will elect an aggregate of seventy delegates who, under the principle of proportional representation, will elect eight members of the State Council. Four other members of the council are to be appointed by the Governor General, who will preside over the council. The State Council will deliberate on bills and will have the right to initiate proposals for Parliament. Bills and other measures of importance to the country may also be brought before the Diet for deliberation and decision by the State Council, which will have the right to levy taxes and issue loans.

"The debates in the State Council and the Diet, at which the chief of the administration will be present as the Government's delegate, are to be in the Polish language."

The uniform of the new Polish Army is described by the Overseas News Agency as combining happily a suggestion of the uniform of the Polish troops which fought under Napoleon I. and that of the present Polish Legions. The blouse of the Legions is to be worn, bearing on the left arm the Polish eagle just as it appeared on the lance of the Polish Uhlans of Napoleon's time.

Russian Leader Says "Independence" Prevents Union.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 15.—Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, telegraphing Tuesday, says:

"At the opening session of the Duma M. Garusseviz, leader of the Polish Parliamentary Party, delivered the reply of the Russian Poles to Germany's declaration of inupendence in Poland, saying:

"'In the very midst of the war the Germanic Powers have had the audacity to anticipate the destiny not only of Poland but of all Central Europe. The Polish Kingdom founded by the Germans will depend in many respects on the Germanic Powers, and will certainly become a weapon of German imperialism.

"'The Polish provinces of Prussia, the cradle of the Polish people, are condemned to an implacable process of Germanization in the future. Galicia remains in the power of the Hapsburgs, and under the pretense of autonomy is deprived of all influence on the internal life of Austria.

"'The Polish people will not consent to a settlement opposed to all their aspirations, the aim of which is the resurrection of the whole of Poland—a resurrection which the war has made a certainty.

AMERICAN CAPTIVES REACH DUTCH SOIL

Passengers from Seized Liner Tell of Ill Treatment at Hands of Germans.

FLUSHING, Holland, Nov. 14.—The three Americans who were on board the Dutch mail steamer Koningen Regentes when the steamer was captured and taken into Zeebrugge by a German submarine, are now safely back on Dutch soil.

They had an experience which they say they are not anxious to repeat. They are Thomas Smith, an American courier; William Goodbody, a New York attorney who had been in attendance upon a legal case in The Hague, and Howard Kimblay. Mr. Smith smilingly asked to be excused from talking owing to his position, and contented himself with saying that he felt very comfortable now and that he did not desire to make a complaint. Mr. Goodbody gave to The Associated Press the following account of his four days' experience:

"We were kept aboard the steamer in Zeebrugge Harbor from Friday until Monday, with uncertainty as to our fate, wondering what would happen next. While aboard we had enough to eat, but the babies on the vessel suffered from a scarcity of milk. Monday morning the passengers were put on board a train, which we neutrals supposed would take us straight across the Dutch frontier. We were mistaken, for the first stop came at Ghent, where we were put on a siding. It appeared that the authorities had no instructions about us, and none desired to take any responsibility.

"Probably the Germans did not want us to see the country, for it was dark when we were sent on to Malines. Here again no one seemed to know about us, and no food was procurable. All we had then was a bottle of milk for the babies, while the adults shared a dry loaf of bread. After the stop at Malines we got to Antwerp at midnight. There we found the same conditions as at Ghent and Malines. No accommodations had been provided for us because the authorities had received no instructions. In a large station room, which was bereft of all comfort, men, women, and children had to sleep on dirty mattresses spread on the floor. This was the most uncomfortable night, but with great difficulty we at least were able to procure some bread.

"On the whole, our treatment by the Germans after we had got off the steamer was decidedly unpleasant. Especially the Belgian women were treated with unnecessary harshness. At 8 o'clock Tuesday morning another train took us toward Holland. At the frontier station of Easchen the customs authorities were not troublesome. The proceedings were only formal there, and we were glad to get to Roosendaal and finally to Flushing."

WATCH CALIFORNIA VOTE FOR A SPLIT

betting market on the Curb. Odds of 1 to 6 that Hughes would yet win out were actively quoted, and a bet of $100 to $600 was reported put through by Frederick Schwede, a Curb man. When the market closed the odds were quoted at 1 to 5, but no bets were reported at this figure.

It appeared on the Stock Exchange as though many traders who went short of stocks on the news of the President's re-election hastened to cover their contracts because of the rumors. Uncertainty over the California count was heightened by impaired wire service with the West, due to the cold wave and snow. Leaders at Republican National Committee headquarters said they were at a loss to account for the rumor.

HUGHES GAINS IN MINNESOTA.

Latest Revision of Returns Makes Republican Lead 1,004.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 14.—The Hughes lead in Minnesota suffered many changes today, but tonight stood at slightly more than 1,000. Returns came slowly into the capital today, and there were several differences between them and unofficial returns previously published. There was a consistent gain for Hughes in the afternoon figures.

The vote tonight, after a complete recheck, stood: Wilson, 178,280; Hughes, 179,284. Hughes's plurality, 1,004.

Added sheets from the County Auditors are expected tomorrow at the State House, and will be gone over unofficially.

Little Change in New Mexico.

SANTA FE, N. M., Nov. 14.—President Wilson made a net gain of forty votes over Charles E. Hughes in official returns from five New Mexico counties reported today to the Secretary of State. The unofficial tabulation, including the official count in the five counties, tonight shows 610 of the 638 precincts in the State have been heard from. The count stands: Hughes, 29,334; Wilson, 31,548, a Wilson lead of 2,224. It is expected a week will elapse before all returns have been received officially.

SOLDIERS' BALLOTS ARRIVE.

Will Be Sorted at Albany and Sent to Local Election Boards.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 14.—More than 40 of the iron bound boxes which conveyed the blank ballots to the 11,000 New York militiamen at McAllen and Pharr, Texas, were returned to Secretary of State Hugo before he closed his office tonight. These cases began to arrive yesterday. They contained the votes of nearly 7,000 of the militiamen.

When the envelopes are all received and sorted they will be sent unopened to the local boards of elections which, under the law, must satisfy themselves of the right of the vote to be cast in their district. Then the envelopes must be opened and the ballots dropped into the ballot box, without inspection. When all are so deposited they must be canvassed.

Henry G. Adams, chief of the election bureau of the Secretary of State's office who went to the border to assist in the election, returned today and took up the work of supervising the distribution of the ballots in their sealed envelopes. He said that probably 60 per cent. of the New York soldiers availed themselves of the franchise. If the remainder of the ballots come along without hindrance he believes the distribution can be completed within a week.

WILSON TO TAKE THE OATH SUNDAY

First Swearing Into Office on March 4 Will Be Repeated the Following Day.

RULING BY JOHN MARSHALL

Chief Justice in 1821 Wrote That Executive Power Was Suspended for a Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—After an examination of its records in a search for precedents, the State Department holds "that in its view there is no interval between the term of one President and the beginning of his successor, although there may be a slight interval when the executive power is suspended." The department also holds that the fact that President Wilson's first term will expire on a Sunday will not leave a hiatus in the office of President until noon of Monday, March 5, 1917, when Mr. Wilson will formally take the oath of office for a second term.

In order to obviate the raising of any question as to what person is exercising the functions of Chief Executive on Sunday, March 4, 1917, Secretary Lansing will advise President Wilson to take the oath for a second term on that day. The oath will be readministered to Mr. Wilson on Monday, March 5.

The ruling of the State Department disposes of the theory that the Secretary of State—in this case, Mr. Lansing—will become Acting President or President ad interim for the period between midnight, of Saturday, March 3, 1917, and noon of Monday, March 5, when Mr. Wilson will be formally inaugurated for a second term. Search of the archives of the State Department brought to light sufficient evidence to lay the ghost of an historical tradition that Vice President Daniel D. Tompkins of New York served as President for the twenty-four hours of Sunday, March 4, 1821, between the first and second terms of President Monroe.

The position of the State Department is based mainly on a letter found in the archives, written by Chief Justice John Marshall to John Quincy Adams, Secretary of State, dated Feb. 20, 1821. Monroe had been elected President for the term beginning March 4, 1817, and re-elected for the term beginning March 4, 1821. The Marshall letter shows that Adams, in conversation with the Chief Justice, had spoken of the fact that March 4, 1821, would fall on a Sunday and he was concerned to know whether it would be proper or permissible for President Monroe to take the oath of office for the second term on that day and if his failure to be inaugurated then would leave a hiatus in the office of President for the twenty-four hours.

The letter is in the handwriting of the Chief Justice and was copied at the State Department today for THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent out of a musty volume of records bound in sheepskin. In its application to the case of Woodrow Wilson, one of the interesting features is that while Mr. Wilson will still be President on Sunday, March, 1917, after his first term expires, he will not be constitutionally empowered to perform any executive function until he has taken the oath of office for a second term on Monday, March 5.

"From Washington, Feb. 20, 1821.

"Sir:

"I have conversed with my brethren on the subject you suggested when I had the pleasure of seeing you, and will take the liberty to communicate the result.

"As the Constitution only provides that the President shall take the oath it prescribes 'before he enters on the execution of his office,' and as the law is silent on the subject, the time seems to be in some measure at the discretion of that high officer. There is an obvious propriety in taking the oath as soon as it can conveniently be taken, and thereby shortening the interval in which the executive power is suspended. But some interval is inevitable. The time of the actual President will expire, and that of the President-elect commence, at 12 in the night of the 3d of March. It has been usual to take the oath at midday on the 4th. Thus, there has been uniformly and voluntarily an interval of twelve hours during which the executive power could not be exercised. This interval may be unavoidably prolonged. Circumstances may prevent the declaration of the person who is chosen until it shall be too late to communicate the intelligence of his election until after the 4th of March. This occurred at the first election.

"Undoubtedly, on any pressing emergency the President might take the oath in the first hour of the 4th of March; but it has never been thought necessary so to do, and he has always named such hour as he deemed most convenient. If any circumstance should render it unfit to take the oath on the 4th of March, and he public business would sustain no injury by its being deferred till the 5th, no impropriety is perceived in deferring it till the 5th. Whether the fact that the 4th of March comes this year on Sunday be such a circumstance may, perhaps, depend very much on public opinion and feeling. Of this, from our retired habits, there are few, perhaps, less capable of forming a correct opinion than ourselves. Might we hazard a conjecture, it would rather be in favor of postponing the oath till Monday, unless some official duty should require its being taken on Sunday. But others who mix more in society than we do can give conjectures on this subject much more to be confided in than ours.

"With very great respect, I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

"J. MARSHALL."

NOW BLAME HUGHES FOR HIS OWN DEFEAT

Republicans at Headquarters Analyze Figures to Show Him Weaker Than Wilson.

HIRAM JOHNSON ABSOLVED

Not California Cutting, but Losses in Many States, Given as Reason for Failure.

All day yesterday intimations of treason in the California Republican camp were voiced by Republican leaders at National Headquarters, but others whose loyalty could not be questioned warmly defended Hiram W. Johnson, the principal object of censure. Chairman William R. Willcox found on his desk yesterday morning an 800-word telegram from Johnson, in which he said nothing about the official count, but indulged in bitter recrimination against the Republican faction in California headed by National Committeeman William R. Crocker. Johnson declared that if there had been any knifing of Mr. Hughes in California, Mr. Crocker and his friends had done it.

Johnson found warm defenders at headquarters, not only among the Roosevelt men who came over to Hughes with the Colonel, but also among Republicans who have not been reckoned friendly to the Moose. Their study of election figures, they said, showed that Mr. Hughes did not fare worse in California than in other Republican States. One of these analysts gave figures to support the theory that the defeat of Mr. Hughes was not due primarily to what happened to him in California, but to his general weakness as a candidate. He reasoned this way:

In all 2,830,000 more votes were cast at last Tuesday's election than at the election four years ago, and of this increase President Wilson received 2,206,000, the balance of 564,000 going to Mr. Hughes. Yet in California and Illinois Mr. Hughes received an increase over the combined Republican-Progressive vote in 1912 of 570,000, or 6,000 more than his total increase when the vote of all States was counted, so that his defeat was certainly not due to knifing in California.

Here is a survey of the vote in a number of important States made by this analyst:

ARIZONA—Total increase over 1912, 29,000. Wilson, 19,000; Hughes, 10,000.

CALIFORNIA—Total increase, 148,000. Wilson, 182,000; Hughes, 166,000.

COLORADO—Total increase, 10,000. Wilson, 44,000 increase; Hughes, 34,000 decrease.

CONNECTICUT—Total increase, 29,000. Wilson, 25,000; Hughes, 4,000.

IDAHO—Total increase, 9,000. Wilson, 34,000 increase; Hughes, 4,000 decrease.

ILLINOIS—Total increase, 869,000. Wilson, 465,000; Hughes, 404,000.

INDIANA—Total increase, 77,000. Wilson, 51,000; Hughes, 26,000.

IOWA—Total increase, 28,000. Wilson, 30,000 increase; Hughes, 2,000 decrease.

KANSAS—Total increase, 253,000. Wilson, 171,000; Hughes, 82,000.

MAINE—Total increase, 8,000. Wilson, 13,000 increase; Hughes, 5,000 decrease.

MASSACHUSETTS—Total increase, 40,000. Wilson, 73,000 increase; Hughes, 33,000 decrease.

MINNESOTA—Total increase, 57,000. Wilson, 70,000 increase; Hughes, 13,000 decrease.

NEW JERSEY—Total increase, 61,000. Wilson, 31,000; Hughes, 30,000.

NEW YORK—Total increase, 119,000. Wilson, 101,000; Hughes, 18,000.

OHIO—Total increase, 143,000. Wilson, 153,000 increase; Hughes, 10,000 decrease.

PENNSYLVANIA—Total increase, 90,000. Wilson, 115,000 increase; Hughes, 23,000 decrease.

Mr. Willcox said he was waiting for the official count in close States before conceding the election to President Wilson or claiming it for Mr. Hughes. When his attention was called to the agitation which has been started for a Congressional investigation of the use of money in the campaign Mr. Willcox said he would welcome such an inquiry.

Chairman Willcox had a talk with Mr. Hughes yesterday morning. Mr. Hughes also had a talk with National Committeeman Herbert Parsons and George W. Perkins. Afterward he took a long walk with Detective Lieut. Sylvester Brierton, who has acted as his bodyguard throughout the campaign, and spent the afternoon answering letters.

DEMOCRATS PAYING DEFICIT.

Committee Hopes to Pay $300,000 Debts Soon.

Responses to requests for contributions, sent out by the Democratic National Committee, to make up the deficiency of upwards of $300,000 in the campaign fund, have already begun to flow in, it was announced at Democratic headquarters yesterday. In the absence of Henry Morgenthau, head of the finance committee, Thomas L. Chadbourne, Jr., and Wilbur W. Marsh, National Treasurer, received a number of checks yesterday. The subscriptions were for various sums, several of them being for $1.

Mr. Chadbourne said he was confident that the deficit would be made up before the end of the week. Vance C. McCormick, Chairman of the National Committee, is expected in New York today. He will remain long enough to wind up the affairs of the committee.

May Disqualify Idaho Elector.

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 14.—Because James E. Pincock, one of the four Democratic presidential electors chosen in Idaho, also was a candidate for the State legislature from Custer County and was elected, Idaho's electoral vote, instead of being four for President Wilson, is likely to stand three for Wilson and one for Hughes, it was reported here today. The law disqualifies any presidential elector who is also the holder of a State position, and Pincock's eligibility probably will be tested, political leaders here say. If he is disqualified, the highest Republican elector may cast his vote.

The Finishing Touch of A Man's Wardrobe

No man would think his outfit complete without a dress suit for evening wear, still a

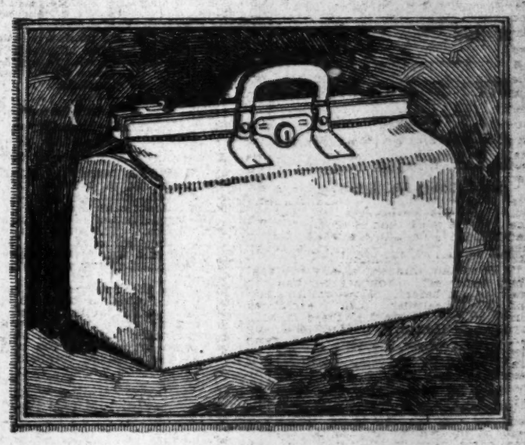
are just as important for the semi-formal and formal occasions of the morning and afternoon. Many men wear them to business. The Cutaway Coat's long association with the Silk Hat has given the coat a stately bearing which it in turn passes on to the wearer.

Today no man who considers himself well dressed would be without a Cutaway Frock.

These Coats are made of dark Oxford Vicuna, silk lined, finished with braided edges. Well tailored along exceptionally graceful lines. The vest, of the same material and finish, shows the same careful workmanship.

High Grade Striped Worsted Trousers, $5.75
Well tailored of material of fine quality. Neat, striped effects in gray, black, and white—appropriate to complete a Cutaway outfit.



THIS Kit Bag is made by us from the finest Oak-tanned young Steer leather. This is stitched to a heavy steel frame. The thread is pure linen, and waxed. The stitches are beautifully regular, and very close together. The leather is so superbly heavy that the frame can never rust through.

The lining is of heavy Persian Goat, very full, to prevent tearing. Even the side pockets are leather lined.

The massive locks and catches are of solid brass, their mechanism keeps the bag closed, and the bottom buttons are brass, with brass rivets.

The handles are of leather, padded comfortably with leather and reinforced with steel.

This bag is worthy of bearing the two marks we have placed upon it—our trademark and our name.

FINDS FOOD AS HIGH HERE AS IN BERLIN

Mme. Frieda Hempel Says Germans in Capital Don't Show Effects of the War.

PRAISES PEOPLE'S SPIRIT

Americans, Singer Thinks, Are Not Victims of Ill-Feeling of Kaiser's Subjects.

Food prices in New York are fully as high as they are in Germany, according to a New York housekeeper who recently returned from a lengthy visit to Berlin. The housekeeper is Mme. Frieda Hempel, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and the statement was made by Mme. Hempel yesterday, in her apartment at 271 Central Park West, where since her return she has been in daily contact with the cost of living in New York.

"Let me be sure," she said, "I will ask my maid,"—and the singer left the room for a few minutes. "The maid says it is so," Mme. Hempel resumed. "The prices of meat and eggs are about the same in Berlin as they are in New York," she says, "but on the whole, if there is any difference, the cost of living in New York at this time is greater than it is in Berlin. You see, that means a decided increase in Berlin, for ordinarily living expenses in Berlin are much lower than in New York.

"It is not true that any one is suffering from lack of food in Berlin," continued Mme. Hempel. "In all the time I spent there I did not see one beggar on the streets, no asking of alms. An American who was with me noticed the same thing and spoke of how remarkable it was. And not one drunken man! Everything so orderly. You would not think there was a war to look at the streets, only there are not so many men to be seen. Everybody looks well, but you do not see so many fat persons.

"For, while there is enough food for every one's needs, it is carefully apportioned by the authorities, so that no one receives more than is required. We had meat five days in the week. Butter was scarce, milk also. People laugh about the food regulation.

"'Yes, I am thinner,' a lady will say, 'but better off. You see we had too much to eat before. Now we have less and are healthier.' Oh," exclaimed Mme. Hempel warmly, "there is such loyalty! Germany is like one big family. The war has drawn all more closely together. It is true the people are tired of the war and would like to see it end, but only honorably for Germany. You do not hear any complaining, and there are no fears that the Allies will break through. I think the people in all the countries are getting tired of the war. An English captain who came over on the ship with me said that it was true in England.

"You do not hear much talk in Berlin of when it may end. Some say in the Spring, some say in a year, but, of course, no one knows, or how it will be brought about. Meanwhile Berlin life shows no signs of depression. Every single theatre is open and they are well attended. Life about the big hotels shows about as usual. I met a number of Americans at the Hotel Adlon in Berlin. They had not been made uncomfortable because of the reported ill-feeling toward Americans in Germany. They seemed to be enjoying themselves. I am sure an American could go about Germany anywhere without any inconvenience."

Mme. Hempel arose, in order to keep an appointment for a rehearsal. A Spitz dog at her feet began to bark.

"That reminds me," she added, "that the worst thing about going in and out of Germany is crossing the frontiers. And that dog was worst of all. He is Italian, too, but I would not think of giving him up. Why, I had to get a passport, or paper, for him. At the frontier I had to see a doctor and the Board of Health and a representative of the Ministry, all on account of the dog. He was more trouble than my eighteen trunks. It is best not to take a dog along on a trip to Germany."

FOR BILLY SUNDAY OPENING.

His Son Arrives to Prepare for Campaign and Build Tabernacle.

George Sunday, son of Billy Sunday, arrived in New York yesterday from Boston to take personal charge of his father's evangelical campaign, which will open in this city on the first Sunday in April, 1917. Offices for the committee have been taken in the Metropolitan Tower, and plans are being made for several church meetings at an early date to outline the work.

It was announced that the committee has definitely decided to build the big tabernacle, which will accommodate 20,000 persons, on the corner of Broadway and 168th Street, being part of the old American League baseball park. The lease for the property was signed a few days ago and construction work will begin early in the new year.

TEMPERATURE DOWN TO FREEZING TODAY

Snow Flurries Are Reported in Jersey and Flakes Fall Here.

COLDER WEATHER TO STAY

Wave That Started In Mountain Region of West Reaches the Atlantic Coast.

Following reports of snow flurries from the outlying districts of Brooklyn, and from Paterson and other points in New Jersey, the Weather Bureau late last night predicted that the temperature would go to between 6 and 8 degrees below freezing this morning. Though the forecast was for fair weather today, light snow flurries started to fall in Manhattan after midnight. It will be still colder tomorrow, the forecast says.

The temperature gradually dropped all day yesterday, starting with 53 degrees at 8 A. M. and reaching 35 degrees at 11 o'clock last night, the last official reading from the Weather Bureau. This gave an average temperature for the day of 44 degrees, which is 3 degrees cooler than the same date last year.

The cold today is the result of the wave that started in the Rocky Mountain region several days ago. This continued moving eastward yesterday and had extended as far south as the Mexican border, where the troops were feeling its effect. The coldest place in the country yesterday was Lander, Wyo., where it was 10 degrees below zero. Pueblo, Col., and Valentine, Neb., both reported 8 degrees below zero, while Charles City, Iowa, and North Platte, Neb., reported 4 degrees below, and Huron, S. D., 2 degrees below.

The Middle West and practically all the States east of the Mississippi River felt the advancing cold yesterday, but it was reported diminishing as it moved eastward. Snow fell in New England, interior New York, the Great Lakes region, and the Upper Mississippi Valley. Rain, sleet, and snow were reported as falling in the Ohio Valley and Tennessee, with sleet and rain in the Gulf States and rain in the Middle States and Southern New England.

Much colder weather was predicted yesterday for the Atlantic and East Gulf States for last night and today, and cold wave warnings were issued for the middle Atlantic States, except interior New York and the East Gulf and South Atlantic States, except Florida.

Temperatures reported yesterday were: El Paso, Texas, 22 degrees; San Antonio, 28; Del Rio, 30; Corpus Christi, 34, and Brownsville, Texas, 38 degrees. Chicago reported 16 degrees; St. Paul, 6; St. Louis, 16; Omaha, 4; Cincinnati, 26; Indianapolis, 20; Buffalo, 24; Portland, 22, and Boston, 32 degrees.

C. C. N. Y. Rearranges Calendar.

The two weeks lost through the delayed opening of the College of the City of New York, owing to the paralysis epidemic, is to be divided between the present term and the next semester, according to an announcement by Dean Carleton L. Brownson of the institution. Each term will now consist of fifteen weeks, instead of sixteen as originally planned. City College will be the only institution in the city to adjust the calendar to the requirements of the length of the collegiate year. The present semester will end on Jan. 19, a week later than usual, and the second will open on Feb. 6.

DR. GRAYSON VOUCHES FOR WILSON'S 'NERVES'

President Played Best Game of Golf Wednesday When the Election Seemed Lost.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 14.—President Wilson's nerves were the steadiest in the official household the day after election, according to Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the White House physician.

Dr. Grayson, who is here to address the Southern Medical Association Convention, told friends tonight that the President beat him at golf Wednesday afternoon, a thing he does not usually do.

"If you want to know about his nerves," said Dr. Grayson, in reply to inquiries on how the President stood the strain of the election, "I will give you something to judge by. I played golf with the President Wednesday, with the news favoring Hughes and everybody excited. He played the best game I ever saw him play. I usually beat him, but he beat me Wednesday. His putting, the real test of golf nerves, was as good as or better than usual. That is how much 'nerves' showed on him."

CABRERA PREVENTS MEXICO AGREEMENT

Charged with Adopting Policy of Obstruction at Commission's Sessions.

SETTLEMENT PLAN UPSET

Carranza's Delegates Likely to be Informed Quibbling Will Not Be Tolerated.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 14.—Luis Cabrera, Chairman of the Mexican Section of the American Mexican Joint Commission, has adopted a policy of obstruction which seems likely to delay greatly, if not prevent, a satisfactory solution of the Mexican tangle, according to authoritative information here today. From the start there has been a tendency on the part of Mr. Cabrera to find fault with suggestions by either the American commissioners or by his colleagues, but it was only when the matter reached a concrete form that his conduct became such as to be considered purposely reactionary.

In his absence on Monday afternoon the commission met without him. The American commissioners, with Mr. Fall and Mr. Bonillas of the Mexican delegation, made rapid headway toward a concrete settlement, and everything looked favorable to an early agreement until Mr. Cabrera returned. At the session this morning he began to tear to pieces the work of the day before, until when the commission adjourned at noon it was farther from an agreement than ever. It is asserted that Mr. Cabrera has limited himself to objecting to the proposals of other members, without himself advancing any alternative course of action.

The Americans were hopeful tonight that they might yet induce the Mexicans to agree to a satisfactory plan for the protection of life and property along the boundary, but it was indicated by those in touch with them that further opposition, characterized as quibbling, would not long be tolerated. There appeared reason tonight to believe that unless the Mexican Chairman adopted a more tractable manner, he and his associates would be informed that further consideration of Mexico's social, economic, and military problems must come to an end.

The agreement that provided for the withdrawal of the American punitive expedition now in Chihuahua and for a method of dealing with border raiders stipulated, it is understood, that the troops should be recalled within a fixed time if within that period the Carranza Government had demonstrated its ability to guard the border against raiding bandits. When Mr. Cabrera reappeared in the commission room this morning he announced his opposition to the details of the plan agreed on.

The Commissioners themselves have remained reticent regarding the unexpected opposition, and all have declined to discuss for publication the details of the plan. It is known that Mr. Cabrera's expression of his dissatisfaction was vehement.

Whether the Mexican commissioner is adopting this course of action on his own initiative or under instructions from General Carranza has not been disclosed here, but it generally is believed that he is acting of his own volition, since the two other commissioners have shown every inclination to arrive at an agreeable settlement.

The future of the commission is problematical unless a marked change takes place at once. Commissioner Cabrera asked for an early adjournment this afternoon to enable him to go to Philadelphia for a further conference with Sub-Secretary of Finance Rafael Nieto. The Mexican Commissioners today made public the following official dispatch on military developments in various parts of Mexico:

"Chihuahua Headquarters informs Quevedo band moving toward San Buenaventura Valley. Strong detachment cavalry in pursuit. Campaign in the South progressing. General Obregon informs capture Tehuantepec, Oaxaca, by rebels false. It as attacked by outlaws who were repulsed, the place remaining hands Government forces."

DRY NEW YEAR'S EVE A POSSIBILITY HERE

Restaurant and Hotel Owners Appeal to Mayor to Extend Their Liquor Privileges.

HE RESERVES HIS DECISION

Theatre Managers Meet to Discuss the Possibility of "Dark" Houses.

New York City may have a dry New Year's Eve. The eve, falling on Sunday this year, has set the cabaret-restaurauteurs and the hotel owners wondering what is going to happen. Already they have appealed to Mayor Mitchel to extend their liquor license privilege to cover Sunday night, and the Mayor is uncertain what decision to make. Theatre managers likewise are apprehensive over the possibility of darkened houses on that usually festive occasion.

It was said at City Hall yesterday that the Mayor was inclined to ask Police Commissioner Woods to enforce the law. The excise law of the State requires that liquor shall not be sold between midnight Saturday and 6 o'clock Monday morning. Hotels are exempt from this rule, and guests may be served at their meals all day Sunday and until 1 o'clock Monday morning. After that hour it is not even lawful to serve guests with liquor in their rooms.

The Anti-Saloon League of New York has begun a movement to curb the sale of liquor on New Year's Eve. William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the league, sent a letter to the Mayor, in which he says:

"Last year, pursuant to the request of many citizens that you refuse extended license on New Year's Eve, you did not permit the sale of liquor all night, but approved applications for special licenses allowing the sale for one hour after the 2 o'clock hour now permitted in some of the restaurants. The testimony seemed general that conditions were improved by this close approximation to the hour fixed by law.

Favors Repressive Measures.

"This year New Year's Eve falls on Sunday, and we respectfully urge that no extra time whatever be granted by way of special permit for the sale of liquor. The present excise law, which is in no sense a temperance measure, recognizes that these permits should not be granted either on Sunday morning or the morning following Sunday, which would necessarily involve a violation of the spirit of the Sunday restriction.

"There will be ample opportunity for orderly people to order dinner within the terms of the law, and they will be better judges of the amount of liquid refreshment to order when they are still sober. Your action last year seemed to be generally approved except by those who are touchy on the purely academic question of alleged interference with so-called personal liberty, which objection is hardly germane, inasmuch as the present excise law deprives more than 5,000,000 people in this city of any personal liberty to sell alcoholic liquor at any time.

"The closing of three times as many saloons on Oct. 1 in New York State, where the people had a chance to vote, as were voted out of South Dakota by State prohibition on Nov. 7, indicates that if the people of New York City were able to express themselves directly and effectively it would be found that the trend here is equally strong in favor of the repression rather than the encouragement of the liquor traffic."

Police Commissioner Woods said last night that the Mayor had not yet called his attention to the matter, and he did not know at this time what action he would take.

Theatre Men Plan Protest.

A meeting of the Untied Managers' Protective Association was held yesterday afternoon in its rooms in the New York Theatre Building to consider the dilemma presented by the falling of New Year's Eve on Sunday this year. Representatives of all factions of theatre managers attended the meeting, but as a quorum was not present definite action was deferred until next Monday. Informal discussions brought out the fact that all factions were in agreement as to steps that should be taken to obtain a special dispensation from Mayor Mitchel to allow all theatres to remain open on that night.

It developed that there was no sentiment favoring a repeal of the law prohibiting dramatic performances and certain kinds of vaudeville acts on Sunday. The managers expressed themselves unanimously against this, which simplified the proposition before the meeting by restricting it to an attempt to gain an abrogation of the law only for this special occasion.

It was decided to appoint a committee to confer with the restaurant and hotel men and others whose business would be affected by an enforcement of the closing law on New Year's Eve, and to ask them to make common cause with the theatres. What action the managers will take if the Mayor denies their request was not discussed, as they chose to believe that he would recognize the merit of their contentions and suspend the statute for the holiday.

HENRY FORD ON STAND.

Says His Plans, If Executed, Would Revolutionize Automobile Trade.

DETROIT, Nov. 14.—Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturer, on the witness stand today, at the Dodge injunction hearing, declared that his plans for spending many millions of dollars to double or treble the capacity of the Ford Motor Car Company's plant would probably revolutionize the automobile business.

Mr. Ford admitted that he contemplated spending millions of dollars to obtain ore deposits, and more millions to erect blast furnaces on the Detroit River near Detroit. When his plans are completed, he testified, his company will be able to ship ore to its furnaces and there make castings direct from the ore. Uniform castings of great strength would result, Mr. Ford said, and he added that lack of uniformity in castings had been one of the great problems which automobile makers have faced

Mr. Ford, as President of his company, is defendant in an injunction suit brought by Horace E. and John F. Dodge, local automobile manufacturers, to restrain him from using the Ford company's profits to develop its business. The Dodge brothers own 10 per cent. of the Ford stock, and demand that the profits, which now total about $50,000,000, be paid out in dividends. They allege that Ford's plans to develop his company are "reckless and unwise."

The hearing, which began today, is upon the motion to make the temporary injunction permanent. The testimony was given before a circuit court commission, and decision will be made by Circuit Judge Henry M. Mandell.

SEEK YOUTH WITH $3,670.

Gotham Bank Messenger, Carrying Money, Fails to Return.

A general alarm was sent out by the police yesterday for Francis O'Rourke, a bank messenger of 211 West 135th Street, at the request of the officials of the Gotham National Bank of New York, Fifty-ninth Street and Broadway. According to the information given the police, O'Rourke left the bank yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock with $3,670 in bills of small denominations to deliver to Sterns & Co., 15 East Forty-second Street. Two hours later the firm notified the bank that the messenger had not arrived, and, fearing some accident had befallen him, the officials notified the police, with the request that a search of the hospitals be made. This was done, but no trace of O'Rourke was found.

O'Rourke had been in the employ of the bank for three months. He went there highly recommended, and seemed ambitious and studious. He had been accustomed to deliver larger sums of money to clients of the bank.

Henry H. Bizallion, President of the bank, notified the company which was on the boy's bond for $5,000.

NEW LAND OF GOLD FOUND IN ARCTIC

Swedish Explorer Brings Back Harpoon Head to Prove His Discovery.

ESKIMOS HOLD THE SECRET

Oil Also in Abundance in Far North, Where Bullets Were Made of Precious Metal.

Bringing a tale of a land where gold is more plentiful than it is in Alaska, Christin Leden, a young Swedish explorer, has returned to this city after three years spent in the arctic. As evidence of the truth of his story he has a harpoon head hammered out of gold by the natives of a camp since wiped out by disease. He has also several specimens of gold-bearing quartz brought to him by Eskimos, who dared many dangers in order to get them. Leden said he had visited a land where the ground was so full of oil that in the warm months the smell of it filled the air.

Mr. Leden's explorations carried him over thousands of miles in the country northwest of Hudson Bay. He went alone, and lived and traveled with the natives and as one of them. He visited the Iglukiks, near Fury and Hecla Straits; the Kinipetus, between the Great Fish River and Chesterfield Inlet; the Netchilliks, near Bootha and the magnetic pole, and the Elvisiliks, near the Wayer River. His outfit was shipped by boat to Fort Churchill, in Hudson Bay, which was the starting point of his travels.

Just where the gold and oil are, Mr. Leden, who is now at the Waldorf-Astoria, will not say. The place where the gold is to be found he did not visit, because to have done so, he said, would have meant another two years in the Far North. The territory was described to him by some Eskimos, who told him of a great hill that had been so split that the different strata were uncovered. Here the reddish-yellow metal could be seen. Mr. Leden persuaded some of those journeying north to search out the place.

"The Eskimos that went in to find it had a terrible time," he said. "Their dogs died and they had to win their way back to the place where I was staying through terrific weather. They attempted to bring back several large specimens of the gold, but conditions became so bad they had to throw them away.

One very old man told how his grandfather, the possessor of an old-fashioned big bore gun, had found a yellow metal that he had hammered out to make bullets. The stories of the Eskimos would indicate that gold is up north in greater abundance than in Alaska. The natives, of course, have no idea of its value."

Mr. Leden's expedition was planned with the idea of making a scientific survey of the country and its people. He said he believes the Eskimo had a common ancestor with the American Indian. He bases his opinion chiefly on their folk lore and their music. He took a phonographic outfit into the Far North, and he brought back many records of Eskimo music.

"The Eskimos have a wonderful language," he said. "It is hard to master because the same word will express so many different things depending upon the inflection, the pronunciation, and relative position. It is much the same as the Indian language. There is the same similarity in their myths and in their poetry.

"Each individual composes his own songs, and by them gives expression to his feeling. Their instrumental music is entirely confined to the drum."

Traveling with the natives, he said, was not only full of peril, but required the utmost diplomacy. The natives are superstitious and they have a firm belief in good and bad spirits. A white man is considered more of a bad spirit than a good one and this, Mr. Leden said, makes him at all times a sort of Jonah in the camp. If the weather is bad, if an accident happens or if sickness comes it is always the white man who is regarded as the cause. If he becomes very sick they are sure it is another manifestation of the anger of the good spirit and so they never lack for an excuse to abandon him.

Tribes living within a few miles of each other he found had no words in common, but the roots of their words are the same. Their common blood is also shown, he said, by the structure of their music and their manner of delivery and it is by these means that he hopes to prove to the scientific world that the Eskimos are related by blood to the Indian and not to the Mongol.

Although he is only 35 years old Mr. Leden has made five trips into the unknown regions of the Far North. He is commissioned by the University of Norway at Christiania, and he also collected for the Geological Survey of Canada.

GEN. HUGHES HITS BACK AT BORDEN

Letters Given Out, Which Show Rift Began with Appointment of Overseas Minister.

RESENTED BRITISH CONTROL

Said Canadian Troops Should Be Independent Except of the Supreme Command.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Nov. 14.—The correspondence which culminated in the retirement from the Government yesterday of General Sir Sam Hughes was made public this afternoon at the request of the ex-Minister of Militia. It showed that the rock upon which the Cabinet split was the establishment of a Canadian Overseas Department of Militia in London, and the appointment of Sir George Perley as head of it.

General Hughes thought such a department unnecessary, and he objected particularly to the appointment of Perley. He insisted that Sir Max Aitken should be the Overseas Militia Minister, but Sir Robert Borden refused to heed this suggestion. The temper of General Hughes's criticism of the refusal left the Premier no other course than to request his resignation.

The correspondence, which opened on Oct. 18, after the return of General Hughes from England, begins politely enough. The Premier expresses the opinion that "the direction of a member of the Government resident in London is both desirable and essential." He notes that there is need for effective control of expenditure, and says:

"The new plan is not intended as a reflection upon your efforts or your administration. I thoroughly appreciate the great ability, the wonderful energy, and the unequaled resourcefulness which you have placed at the service of the country ever since the outbreak of the war."

In reply General Hughes said that the proposal for a Resident Minister in Britain was "absurd," and added:

"From the outset I strongly objected to the fact that practically the entire management of our forces, our supplies, our equipment, our transport, &c., had been taken completely out of our hands, and was controlled by the British forces, we, nowithstanding, paying the bill."

Sir Sam says he called the attention of the late Earl Kitchener to these matters in October, 1914. The British War Minister said he understood it was the desire of the Canadian Government that the troops were to be handed over absolutely as British regulars.

"To this I objected" continued Sir Sam, "and pointed out that I fully believed our forces, under officers of our own selection, should at the front be under the command of the British Commander in Chief, yet the appointment of officers at the front and the control of everything in connection with the force while in Britain should be entirely with Canada."

It appears that General Hughes while in England last Summer appointed, contrary to the specific instructions of the Prime Minister, a Militia Council in London. When Sir Robert heard of the appointment he sent this cable:

"Greatly surprised that composition of proposed Overseas Council is announced in press this morning. Hope you can return immediately. Kindly cable date."

The correspondence grows warmer as it proceeds. Eventually the Premier charges his Minister with refusing to recognise the authority of the Government, and General Hughes retorts that "war cannot be successfully waged on the tactics of a lawsuit."

"Sir Robert," he writes, "I have known and experienced for a long time the meddling and intrigue which has been going on. More than a year ago I understood you had it in contemplation to get Sir George Perley in control in England.

"It is difficult for me to recall where you have actively supported me in the passage of any Order in Council concerning the upbuilding of the militia when opposed by the two members of the Cabinet, usually antagonistic to anything proposed by me."

In another communication General Hughes says:

"Had I ventured to conduct this force on the basis of formal Orders in Council, the First Division would not have left Valcartier yet; and you know yourself how by technicalities the Second Division was held up for four months through little petty haggling on the question of motor trucks, &c."

On the receipt of this letter Sir Robert Borden demanded his resignation. It was given with alacrity, and today General Hughes moved his belongings out of the Militia Building. Before his departure he said he was going to engage in recruiting work.

In one of his letters the ex-Minister suggested that Sir Robert Borden contemplated resigning the Premiership and going on the Supreme Court Bench or becoming Canadian High Commissioner in London; but the Premier today dismissed this as "purely imaginative." He said the rumor that he would retire from public life was "absolutely destitute of foundation." "I deem it my duty," he said, "to remain at my post until the close of the war, and I will so remain so long as I have the mandate of the people."

FOR CITY COLLEGE STATION.

Students Want the Interborough to Change Name of 137th St.

Students of the College of the City of New York are circulating a petition to have the 137th Street subway station renamed the "City College Station" by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The Student Council has appointed a committee to obtain signatures among the thousands of students in the day and night sessions of the college, the organ recital patrons, the faculty, the alumni, and the 5,000 teachers who attend the City College courses.

Dr. Sydney E. Mezes is heartily in favor of the project, and a committee of the Board of Trustees has been appointed to negotiate with the Public Service Commission to obtain the desired change. The Interborough Company has so far refused to rename the station.

Schieffelin Left Only $500.

Letters of administration on the estate of Edgar S. Scheffelin, who committed suicide on Nov. 7 at the Hotel Empire, were granted yesterday by Surrogate Cohalan to Mrs. Nerma Schieffelin of 619 West 127th Street, who described herself as the widow and heir at law of Mr. Schieffelin. She said in her petition that he left no will and had personal property valued at $500.

tigation of alleged election frauds in Indiana Monday, according to present plans of the Federal Court authorities.

"The Republican National Committee will welcome the fullest investigation of every penny spent by it," Chairman William R. Willcox of the committee said yesterday when informed of the steps for a Senatorial investigation announced at Washington. He said that no charges or information as to alleged misuse of funds in the campaign had been sent to any officials in Washington by the Republican Committee.

HOUSE CONTINUES IN DOUBT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House, reached Washington today and conferred with Democratic leaders regarding the Congressional election, which, according to the latest unofficial returns, leaves control of the next House in doubt. The Speaker first conferred with Representative Doremus of Michigan, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, who predicted, despite unofficial returns indicating the election of five more Republicans than Democrats, that the final canvass would give the Democrats control, and that the Speaker would be re-elected.

Representative Doremus contended early in the day at the White House that 213 Democrats and only 211 Republicans surely had been elected, and that there were nine doubtful districts. He reiterated this later to Speaker Clark, Senator Stone of Missouri, and other Democratic leaders, enumerating districts which he believed would show Democratic victories on the official count. During the day, however, there were no changes in the unofficial results, now indicating the election of 217 Republicans, 212 Democrats, 2 Progressives, 1 Progressive-Protectionist, 1 Independent, 1 Socialist, and 1 Prohibitionist.

Representative Doremus, in his statement of doubtful districts at the informal conference of party leaders, conceded that official returns would show the election of W. O. Martin, Democrat, over W. P. Martin, Progressive-Protectionist, in Louisiana; Zebulon Weaver, Democrat, over James J. Britt, Republican, in North Carolina; Thomas J. Scully, Democrat, over Robert Carson Republican, in New Jersey; Samuel W. Beakes, Democrat, over Mark R. Bacon, Republican, in Michigan; T. J. Steele, Democrat, over G. C. Scott, Republican, in Iowa, and M. Clyde Kelly, Progressive, over William H. Coleman, Republican, in Pennsylvania.

In addition, Mr. Doremus insisted that Clyde H. Tavenner, Fourteenth Illinois; Harry B. Mitchell, Montana, at large, and Thomas G. Patten, Eighteenth New York, all apparently defeated by Republicans, had excellent chances of ultimate success. He asserted that, despite reports of the election of Miss Jeanette Rankin, Republican, in Montana, by a majority of 400, Harry B. Mitchell had won by a majority of 100. Tonight, however, Mr. Doremus received a message from the Democratic candidate conceding the election of Miss Rankin by a safe majority and abandoned his claim for the Montana district.

Republican leaders are claiming the final results will show the election of A. J. Barchfeldt, Republican, over Guy E. Campbell, Democrat, in the Thirty second Pennsylvania District, and Robert F. Duer, Republican, over Jesse D. Price, Democrat, in the First District of Maryland. Announcement of a contest in the Maryland District was made today. In the Thirty-second Pennsylvania District on the official count today Campbell, Democrat, had made a net gain of 14 votes in two Pittsburgh wards.

Searching inquiry at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 14.—"Cincinnati will be the scene of a Federal Grand Jury investigation which may rival in its scope the election probe at Terre Haute, Ind., which resulted in wholesale indictments," said Special United States Assistant Attorney General Frank C. Dailey here today. A Grand Jury will be convened within two months to take up the investigation of violations of the election laws in this city and other points in this Federal district.

HOSTILITY TO DANIELS IN NAVY DIMINISHES

Character of His Aids and His Coolness Under Criticism Are Factors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The close of the political campaign and the understanding that Josephus Daniels will be retained by President Wilson as the Secretary of the Navy have served to show that the bitterness among many of his critics has been considerably allayed and a kindlier feeling prevails toward him in quarters where he was formerly assailed mercilessly for his administration of the Navy Department.

The change in feeling is attributed mainly to the character of the men with whom Mr. Daniels has surrounded himself recently in the Naval Administration. There is still some criticism in the navy generally over the fact that most of the heads of the naval bureaus come from the South, but it is acknowledged that the selections have been good in William S. Benson, chief of naval operations, is a South Carolinian. His assistant chief is from Louisiana. Of the bureau chiefs, all officers of the navy, three are Virginians, one is a Missourian, and another is from South Carolina. The Judge Advocate General is a Tennessean. The other bureau chiefs of the department are from New York and Pennsylvania.

Secretary Daniels's suggestion that welfare workers be placed on each warship was not received with favor. Neither was his establishment of schools on shipboard with officers as teachers. A report that he had drafted an order that officers should take their meals with the enlisted men was said to be concerned as under by the subjects as by the officers themselves. According to the story, an official of the Navy Department called attention to the fact that there were negroes among the enlisted personnel. The order was not issued, if it ever was drawn. The order abolishing the wine mess on ships of war also caused criticism, but this has died out.

One thing that has impressed some naval officers in Washington in favor of Mr. Daniels is the manner in which he has taken the severe criticism. Friends of his say that where he found the critics had cause for what they alleged he sought to remedy the errors they had pointed out. Mr. Daniels is said to have suffered under the hard knocks he received, but to have kept his temper with a sportsmanlike stoicism, and statements along this line have served to emphasize the growing kindly feeling for him that is now noticeable in naval circles in Washington.

RAILROADS CONSIDER CAR-SHORTAGE PERIL

Foreign Line Diversions to be Checked by $1.25 Per Diem Charge and Penalties.

COMMISSION MEETS HERE

Officials of Big Carriers Make Recommendations to be Acted On Today.

Fear of another car shortage such as excluded hundreds of thousands of shippers from the Atlantic seaboard last Winter, and which has been considered as a serious factor in the threatened coal famine, caused the American Railway Association to give serious consideration to radical revisions of car service rules yesterday. One hundred Presidents and other officials of the roads debated the recommendations at a preliminary conference in the Hotel Biltmore, and then adjourned until this morning to take final action.

The time-honored practice of many of the railroads of the country of confiscating cars of other roads and withholding them from their owners under a small per diem rate received chief consideration at the meeting. It was reported that the Adamson eight-hour law was discussed in sub-committee, but none of the officials would comment on the subject.

Chief among the recommendations for correcting existing abuses was one to impose a heavy tax on railroads which diverted foreign lines' freight cars to their own uses. This recommendation was based on an investigation conducted by the Presidents and Vice Presidents of four big railroads, forming a committee, known as the Commission on Car Service.

Under the existing practice railroads pay 45 cents a day for using freight cars belonging to other roads. This tax having failed to prevent the diversion of freight cars for long periods, it is now proposed to raise the per diem rate to a maximum of $1.25 a day, and also to impose a penalty of from $5 to $10 a car.

Enforce Rules, Commission Urges.

Copies of the proposed revisions and of the recommendations of the Commission on Car Service were handed to the members of the American Railway Association as they entered the conference room yesterday. The commission consisted of Fairfax Harrison, President of the Southern Railway; R. H. Aishton, President of the Chicago & North Western Railway; H. E. Byram, Vice President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad; G. L. Peck, Fourth Vice President of the Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh, and A. H. Smith, President of the New York Central Railroad.

It reported, in part, as follows:

"The commission is unanimous in the opinion that, whatever is the solution of the problem, the existing car service rules are not now enforced, and that their efficiency in principle has not been proved because they are not enforced. Having respect for the historical development of these rules, the commission is of opinion further that an earnest and sincere attempt should now be made to give them effect, in order that it may be proved once and for all whether or not they provide the machinery necessary for a correct solution of the problem."

"Summed up," the report continued, "on the first comprehensive study of the current practice of a limited number of principal and typical railroads in all parts of the United States there were readily found more than 40,000 violations of the rules in a single month. The evidence was so overwhelming that the inspection was thereupon suspended, and the commission faced the facts anew.

"Under the rules constituting the commission it has the authority to impose fines for violations of the rules after trial and judgment. In May last the commission gave public notice that it would exercise this power. After considering the reports of its Inspectors, the commission concluded, however, that its powers were not adequate effectively to deal with the actual situation. The commission, therefore, now proposes certain modifications of the rules, and, in aid of consideration of its suggestions, reminds the railroads of the judgment of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of Missouri and Illinois Coal Company vs. Illinois Central Railroad Company."

Legal Judgment Is Quoted.

Two excerpts from the judgment quoted in the report are:

"1. That the temporary confiscation by carriers of the cars of other railroads and the placing of embargoes against cars being sent off the lines of the owners are alike unlawful, and the railroads are expected to make such rules for the return of cars as will terminate such abuses.

"2. The railroads of the country are called upon so to unite themselves that they will constitute one national system; they must establish through routes, keep these routes open and in operation, furnish the necessary facilities for transportation, make reasonable and proper rules of practice as between themselves and the shippers and as between each other."

Acting on the findings of the Commission on Car Service, the Committee on Relations Between Railroads recodified the rules governing operation, and these revisions were handed to the members yesterday.

"A road diverting a foreign car," one of the paragraphs of the recodified rules says, "shall pay to the owner thereof the sum of $5 in addition to the per diem, and shall report same as a separate item on the per diem report for the month in which the car was diverted.

"The rate for the use of freight cars shall be 45 cents a car per diem, but may be increased for a specified period to an amount not in excess of $1.25 a car per diem, which shall be paid for every calendar day, and shall be known as the per diem rate.

"If the commission shall find that a diversion has been made without being reported, as required under Per Diem Rule 8, it shall impose a penalty of $10 for each such diversion, one half to go to the owner of the car diverted, one half to the American Railway Association."

After these recommendations had been considered by the railroad officials in general conference they were taken up more fully by the Executive Committee of the association. J. E. Fairbanks, General Secretary and Treasurer, said that no statement would be issued until after the meeting today.

L. & N. to Continue Embargo.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 14.—Embargoes placed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad against the movement of its coal cars to points beyond its own rails will not be lifted until missing equipment is actually returned, according to C. B. Phelps, Superintendent of Transportation of that road. His declaration was made today at hearings in connection with an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission into car exchange methods, in answer to questions by counsel for coal operators along the lines of the Louisville & Nashville, who market their product in the North and Northeast. He had been asked if his road would not lift its embargoes in view of the fact that other roads have agreed to the return of all foreign coal cars to the owning lines.

J. W. Roberts, Superintendent of Freight Transportation of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh, was the principal witness today. He detailed at length the situation which, he declared, has faced the Pennsylvania and other roads as a result of the country-wide car shortage. There had been, he said, a general demand for all classes of cars, but particularly for open-top cars, such as coal cars. Of this class of cars, he said, the Pennsylvania was able to command only about one-half of its actual requirements.

WESTBOUND EMBARGO IS ON.

Pennsylvania Refuses Shipments of Freight Except Food.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—For the first time in its history the Pennsylvania Railroad has been forced to place an embargo on all shipments out of Baltimore to the West, except on food for human consumption, owing to the congestion in Western terminals. The Pennsylvania some days ago placed an embargo on export shipments of grain, steel, and other products moving through Baltimore, New York, and Philadelphia.

It is understood that congested conditions still prevail around Chicago and other important points in the West, and rather than add to this congestion the Pennsylvania management deemed it wise to refuse shipments of all kinds except foodstuffs.

8-HOUR CONFERENCE PUT OFF.

Railroad Men and Managers Will Wait for Washington Hearings.

The railroad managers and representatives of the "Big Four" railway brotherhoods failed to renew their peace conference over the question of the application of the Adamson eight-hour law yesterday. It was said unofficially that there probably would be no more conferences until after the hearings before the Newlands committee, which begin on Monday. It was said that there might not be any more conferences at all.

The Newlands committee is to hold public hearings on the railroad situation generally, and most of the brotherhoods officials who came to New York for their Monday conference with railroad managers have now gone to Washington to attend the committee hearings. Before they left their ultimatum of "an eight-hour day on Jan. 1—regardless of court decisions—or a general strike" was repeated, while the railroad officials stuck to their decision to apply to the courts to test the constitutionality of the Adamson law.

It was reported during the day that five additional roads besides those who have already taken action would begin legal proceedings within the next week or so. Thus far proceedings have been started only by Western roads. It was reported that proceedings would now be started by the New Haven, the New York Central, the Erie, the Boston & Maine, and the Lackawanna.

SWITCHMEN ASK 8-HOUR DAY.

Prefer Less Pay if Necessary to Accomplish Result.

The members of the Switchmen's Union want to work only eight hours a day, even if they get less money than they are now making by overtime work, according to the testimony brought out at yesterday's session of the Mediation Board which is considering their demands. The board is holding its meetings in the Chamber of Commerce Building at 65 Liberty Street, and the Switchmen, whose union comprises about 10,000 workers, are demanding an eight-hour day and increased pay, with time and a half pay for overtime.

Peter J. Finnegan, yard conductor for the New Haven Railroad, one of the witnesses at the afternoon session, testified some yards were now run on the eight-hour basis with excellent results. He said he worked in one of them, and that while the men didn't make much money, he would rather take less money for the shorter hours.

Other witnesses told of working between twelve and fourteen hours per day on the average, and stated that the switchmen worked frequently under harrowing conditions which made more than eight hours work a day a severe strain. F. D. Reid, employed in the B. & O. terminal in Chicago, told of working in the yards during snow storms and when icicles formed on the switchmen's faces. He said he had once seen a husky switchman actually crying because he had been exposed to the cold so long.

"What are your reasons for asking for an eight-hour day?" Reid was asked.

"We think an eight-hour day is enough for a man to work," he replied.

"You want no overtime then?

"No. We want eight hours straight. There is a belief among the men that they could do more work in eight hours. When they come to work now they are not fresh."

WILSON'S PICTURE BARRED.

White House Will Ask Merchants to Discontinue Trademark.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Woodward, Baldwin & Co., dealers in heavy sheeting, at 43 Worth Street, New York, will receive a letter from the White House asking that the firm's use of a pen and ink portrait of President Wilson be discontinued as part of an advertisement which the firm is publishing. The sketch is labeled, "Trademark."

An officer of the White House said tonight that the use of the President's picture was objectionable, and if the request to discontinue using it was not complied with, other measures would be taken.

WILSON GREETINGS TO JAPAN BY WIRELESS

President's Message to Emperor Will Mark Inauguration of the Marconi Service Today.

Greetings will be exchanged today by wireless across the Pacific Ocean between President Wilson and the Emperor of Japan to mark the inauguration of the Marconi wireless service between the United States and Japan. The Marconi service between the United States and Hawaii has been in operation since Sept. 24, 1914, and with the extension to Japan connection will be made with the Japanese Imperial Telegraph System to all points in the Orient.

Messages will be sent from the high-power transmitting station of the Marconi Company at Bolinas, Cal., to its receiving station at Kahuku, Hawaii, whence they will be transmitted to Funabashi, Japan, where the high-power station of the Japanese Government is located. Messages from Japan will be relayed at Kahuku for the receiving station of the Marconi Company at Marshall, Cal., which station has direct communication with the Western Union Telegraph Company, over whose wires the traffic will be forwarded.

The service will be started at San Francisco at 10 A. M., Eastern time, which will correspond to midnight at Tokyo and 4:30 A. M. at Honolulu. Other congratulatory messages will be exchanged between the Japanese Ambassador at Washington and the Prime Minister of Japan, between John W. Griggs, President of the Marconi Company, and the former Japanese Ambassador, T. Takahira, and between Edward J. Nally, General Manager of the American Marconi Company, and Jiro Tanaka, Director General of Posts and Telegraphs of Japan.

POLICE FORCE HYPER-BUSY.

Hastings's Seven Guardians Can't Bother with the Strike.

Thomas J. Goodwin, President of the Village of Hastings, has declined to accede to a request of Leslie Sutherland, General Manager of the Yonkers Railroad Company, that he put the Hastings police force of seven men on guard over the cars of the trolley company, which is trying to maintain service in face of a strike. Mr. Goodwin says his force has too much to do to "bother with the affairs of the poorly managed railroad," and, in support of his contention, he has prepared a list of the activities required of the two men on duty in the daytime. Five of the seven work only at night to protect the village against burglars.

Mr. Goodwin's list shows that one policeman opens the jail, feeds the prisoners, gets the courtroom ready for sessions, attends prisoners to the court, hustles out among their friends or to their homes and collects their fines, escorts them in an automobile to the county jail, in White Plains, where they are held; acts as a traffic regulator, dividing his time between Main Street and Washington Avenue; looks out for fights, which are of almost hourly occurrence in the foreign district, and answers the fire alarms.

The second man guards traffic in Broadway, protects the school children, and patrols a square mile of streets, most of which runup hill. Outside of this the men's time is their own, and President Goodwin says there isn't enough left to devote to the trolley company.

Here's how The Dictaphone works—set down in 1-2-3 order

Thousands of business men know The Dictaphone is the one office appliance that is as indispensable as the telephone—that it is the direct method of dictation—but quite a number do not know just what it does and how.

Here is how it is used:

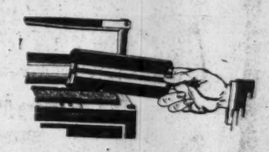
1 Slip on a blank cylinder, set the "dictate" lever, pick up the mouth piece and talk into it. And that is all. Your finger on the control button starts and stops The Dictaphone as your ideas come fast or slow. To listen to what you dictate, simply reverse the "dictate" lever and listen. Corrections? The easiest thing The Dictaphone does.



2 When the cylinder is full, stand it in the rack, with the correspondence that goes with it.

3 The boy takes the dictated cylinder to the operator. If you want the typing started before the cylinder is full, all right. Send it to the operator.

4 The operator slips the dictated cylinder on her Dictaphone, places the hearing tubes in position and starts writing; meantime her foot has pressed the stop. When she has written what she has listened to, she lifts her foot and listens some more. And so on. The typist controls the dictation.

5 There isn't any 5. That's all there is to it.

Each cylinder holds up to 15 average letters. After the dictation is transcribed the office boy shaves off the recorded surface and the record is all ready for another batch of dictation. This operation is repeated at least a hundred times—making the cost of cylinders less than the cost of stenographers' note-books.

SHAW AND DUNSANY IN GRAND STREET

New Plays of Theirs Presented by Gertrude Kingston at the Neighborhood.

"THE INCA OF PERUSALEM"

Shaw Is Suspected of This Tedious Travesty on the Kaiser, and Confesses to the "Great Catherine."

GREAT CATHERINE, a short comedy by George Bernard Shaw; THE QUEEN'S ENEMIES, a playlet by Lord Dunsany; THE INCA OF PERUSALEM, an anonymous one-act comedy. At the Neighborhood Playhouse.

THE PLAYERS—Gertrude Kingston, Walter Ringham, Leslie Austen, Colin Campbell, Neil Compton-Mackenzie, Dorie Sawyer, Louise Coleman, Henley Edwards, Wells Spalding, George Abbott, Albert J. Carroll, Erskine Sanford, Alice Lewisohn, C. Haviland Chappell, Hubert Osborne, David Kimball.

The dramatic event of the week occurred last evening not on Broadway or near it, but far down on Grand Street, at the pretty Neighborhood Theatre, which, every once in so often, pauses amid its purely neighborhood work long enough to shift for a little while the centre of things theatrical. Last evening Gertrude Kingston, director of London's Little Theatre, gave there a program of three short plays, all of them new to the New York stage. They are the work of the foremost Irish dramatists—George Bernard Shaw and Lord Dunsany.

Mr. Shaw is represented by his "Great Catherine," one of his most brilliant and characteristic attempts at history in negligée, and also by an anonymous and extremely tedious travesty on the Kaiser called "The Inca of Perusalem." Lord Dunsany is to be seen at his second best in "The Queen's Enemies," a play of ancient Egypt, presented last evening for the first time on any stage. A distinguished and eager audience greeted Miss Kingston's program, and there is some reason to believe that after her fortnight in Grand Street she will bring her company up to some theatre near the subway.

"The Inca of Perusalem" comes first. This one-act play, which had been presented only in Birmingham before Miss Kingston brought it here, is gravely proferred as "an almost historical comedietta by a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature," but it is a secret of Polichinelle that Shaw wrote it.

The pretense of mystery is maintained in the face of overwhelming external and internal evidence to that effect. Probably only Shaw would treat the Kaiser in just this way, and certainly only Shaw would put forth so oppressively talkative a play. "The Inca of Perusalem" is a bit of extravagant fooling, weighted with wisdom and irradiated at rather long intervals by brilliant flashes. But it would be more entertaining to read than to see in the theatre, and that is a fearful thing to say about a play.

The Inca of Perusalem, who wears the uniform of a German officer and has mesmeric mustaches, journeys incognito to a Continental hotel to inspect a Princess as a potential bride for one of his innumerable sons, and the whole excuse of the play is just the opportunity it affords him to have a good heart-to-heart talk with her lady-in-waiting.

It seems that the Inca not only has no fears of St. Helena, but has actually been playing his cards in the hope of being banished there.

"The fools talk of crushing the Inca," says the Inca with his mustaches bristling scornfully, "but they little know their man. Tell me this. Why did St. Helena extinguish Napoleon? Because, madam, with certain rather remarkable qualities which I would be the last to deny, Napoleon lacked versatility. After all, any fool can be a soldier; we know that only too well in Perusalem, where every fool is a soldier. But the Inca has a thousand other resources."

You see, the Inca as architect, composer, and painter, feels he could draw the eyes of the world to St. Helena and be ready for the day.

"Take this from me, hereditary monarchs are played out; the age for men of genius has come; the career is open to the talents; before ten years have elapsed every civilized country from the Carpathians to the Rocky Mountains will be a Republic. * * * The Inca will then have his first real chance. He will be unanimously invited by those Republics to return from his exile and act as Superpresident of all the republics."

Indeed, he rather envies the American President.

"He can do what he likes," says the Inca gloomily. "Look at the letters he writes!"

And here is the Apologia of the Kaiser as Shaw would write it for him:

"Why the devil do they fight if they don't want to? I am only one man and they are millions. Do you suppose they would really kill each other if they didn't want to, merely for the sake of my beautiful eyes? Do not be deceived by newspaper claptrap, madam. I was swept away by a passion not my own, which imposed itself on me. By myself I am nothing. I dare not walk the principal street of my own capital in a coat two years old, though the sweeper of that street can wear one ten years old. You talk of death as an unpopular thing. You are wrong; for years I gave them art, literature, science, prosperity, that they might live more abundantly; and they hated me, ridiculed me, caricatured me. Now that I give them death in its frightfulest forms, they are devoted to me. If you doubt me, ask those who for years have begged our taxpayers in vain for a few paltry thousands to spend on Life; on the bodies and minds of the nation's children, on the beauty and healthfulness of its cities, on the honor and comfort of its worn-out workers. They refused; and because they refused, death is let loose on them. They grudged a few hundred a year for their salvation; they now pay millions a day for their own destruction and damnation. And this, they say, is my doing. Let them say it if they dare before the judgment seat at which they and I shall answer equally for what we have left undone no less than for what we have done."

So much for the internal evidence. But after all "The Inca of Perusalem," as a play, does not matter, and "Great Catherine" does. This comedy, first presented in London three years ago, since played in Boston, and familiar to the readers of Everybody's, is an historical comedy of exceptional fidelity to the records of Catherine's court. It is vastly entertaining in performance and Miss Kingston's skill as a comedienne is delightfully exhibited in the title rôle, which she plays with great gusto for all the German there is in it. The entire performance is gay and competent. "Great Catherine" is a treat.

"The Queen's Enemies" is vivid, picturesque, and interesting, but it will be a disappointment to that growing band of enthusiasts for the author of "The Gods of the Mountain" and "A Night at an Inn." It is a colorful work of the Dunsany imagination, but it is less rich in the overtones of philosophic significance which gave universality to these best of his plays. Deep down in an oppressive underground temple, the little queen of ancient Egypt receives her enemies. Professing love for all the world, she beguiles them there to feast at her board, for, as she says, she must have no more enemies. Kings of many countries, high priests and jealous princes come uneasily to this strange levee, but her winning guilelessness, her very frailty, disarms them and they are drinking gayly of her wine, then she locks them underground and lets in the waters of the worshipped Nile. And she has no more enemies. Although this play is huddled in staging, Alice Lewisohn is arresting and altogether charming as the little queen—the first important woman's role in any play by Lord Dunsany.

NOBODY BUT WILSON?

It is not ungracious to say in this hour of Democratic victory that the Democracy at present is in a sense a one-man party. What Democrat in public life, what Democrat in private life not too old for active public service, is capable of taking up the inheritance of WOODROW WILSON? To his intellectual succession, to his sympathetic comprehension of the feelings, the opinions, and the interests of the average man, to his knowledge and experience of public affairs, to his gift of graceful and convincing speech, no heir is to be expected. Such a combination of mental strength, of political insight and dexterity, is rare. On the other hand, Mr. WILSON has defects from which his successor in the Democratic chieftaincy may be free. His readiness of speech, his gift of style sometimes lure him into impulsive utterances that can be construed by hostile interpreters into an unfortunate meaning. A talent for epigram in a politician has its dangers as well as its advantages. Mr. WILSON's essential solitariness, the curious eremite disposition in him which he evidently deplores, has been an obstacle in his path. He has won a wide, indubitable popularity in spite of it. His purposes and achievements have touched the popular heart. It may be said that in gregariousness, in the strong support of multitudes, he has found a remedy for a certain constitutional loneliness. Or perhaps it would be more correct to infer that the student and thinker in him, in the innumerable contacts of public life, have gradually become uncloistered, that his nature has expanded in the gratitude of the people, the response to his efforts in their behalf, the late perception that millions acknowledge his high intentions and fruitful merits, despite errors of judgment and policy. At any rate, the hermit in him promoted misunderstanding of the real WOODROW WILSON. His original aloofness was a defect, from which his successor is not likely to suffer.

Now, nobody is looking for the impossible, or searching the land for another JACKSON, CLEVELAND, or WILSON. Both parties are poor in great figures. No young Mr. ROOT is visible. None but himself can be Mr. ROOSEVELT's parallel. For the moment the sturdy, bellicose, and commanding HIRAM JOHNSON, coming out of the West, the present seat of political power, might inspire a too early prophecy, but where is the man fit to wear Mr. WILSON's mantle? The question is not idle or premature. Whatever the fortunes or misfortunes of the Democratic Party in the next four years, whether, having broken the tradition of more than half a century, it will be able to succeed itself in 1921, whether the disrupted Republican Party can be revived into vigor, whether Democratic errors and dissensions will bring it into power, the Democracy will need a capable chief. This election was won by an unconscious coalition of Democrats, Progressives, independents. As in JACKSON's day, it is the West, with its deeper democratic feeling, its contempt of mere forms and traditions, its hearty radicalisms, its insistence upon progress, its modernism, that is the strength of the new Democracy. Will some Democratic Governor, some accidental GROVER CLEVELAND or WILLIAM E. RUSSELL, impress himself upon the popular imagination? Or can the East produce a marrowy man, calculated for Western longitudes?

FOUR BADGERS.

In the House of the Sixty-fourth Congress there are three Democrats from Wisconsin, MICHAEL E. BURKE of Beaver Dam, MICHAEL K. REILLY of Fond du Lac, THOMAS E. KONOP of Green Bay. In the House of the Sixty-fifth Congress there will be no Democrats from that State. BURKE, REILLY, and KONOP voted against tabling the McLemore resolution. They deserved defeat. Their defeat and the lambasting the hyphen got in Milwaukee are signs of sound political health among the Badgers.

If it be thought curious and unfortunate that, while these three offenders were punished, a greater offender, Senator LA FOLLETTE, who voted against tabling the Gore resolution and favors an embargo on the exportation of munitions, was re-elected, we are to remember that he is an exception to all rules. He was nominated, he was re-elected, by the votes of Republicans and Democrats. He is not for HUGHES. He is not for WILSON. He is solely and perpetually for LA FOLLETTE, his candidate for President in 1912, 1916, 1920, and till the end of the chapter. Nothing seems to make any difference in his political fortunes. He always plays a lone hand and it wins.

EXIT SIR SAM.

General Sir SAM HUGHES, Canadian Minister of Militia and Defense since 1911, is out of the Canadian Government at last. Sir ROBERT BORDEN, the Premier, says that he asked for Sir SAM's resignation. Indeed, his peppery and domineering character, his freedom of speech, his energetic habit of doing things in his own way, had long embroiled him with his colleagues. But his work speaks for him. He was the prophet of preparedness in the Dominion. When the war began, he set on foot a recruiting campaign which cannot be praised too highly for its results. He sent England more soldiers than she asked for. They were equipped. They were drilled. There are no better men in the trenches, as to physique, morale, spirit, and knowledge of their business, than SAM HUGHES's Canadians. With inexhaustible vigor he pegged away at his task. He is now in part the victim of that vigor. He has sent over so many Canadians, more than 200,000 that the Canadian Government insists there must be an Overseas Minister of Militia to look after them. SAM HUGHES loves authority, power. He has no stomach for any diminution of it. He has had trouble with the British bigwigs. He has been and is at swords' points with his associates over a multiplicity of matters which it would be superfluous to recite. It is enough to say that he is no friend of red tape, that he is by temperament and habit bound to run things, and that you can't conceive him as happy or even patient in any Cabinet unless he were Premier, in which case he would probably boss all the Ministries.

Somehow SAM HUGHES seems like a Far Western American who might have been in Colonel ROOSEVELT's regiment, and has something of the Colonel's demoniac activity. He kicked about Australia and South Africa in his boyhood, acquiring, if he didn't have it before, that Colonial impatience of convention and that bluff democracy which, before the war, used to make so many highly respectable Britishers look down upon Australians as a sort of savages. He was school teacher, editor, soldier. A Colonel in the Boer war, he went back to Canada to preach a national democratic army. He got into the Canadian Parliament nearly twenty-five years ago, but his great opportunity came in 1914. The armies he called forth are a record and a monument which no mistakes of his, no squabbles this side or the other of the water, no protuberance of his will, self-will, assertiveness, can impair. He has substantially done his work. His manners to his colleagues, a certain arrogance of tone, all his peculiarities and disagreeabilities, his positiveness, heat, and loudness, all these may be granted. What he has done is noble and memorable. A salient, an angular, a forcible personage.

SINGLE-TAX WATERLOOS.

A Portland dispatch says that the "full rental land tax," alias the single tax, was "overwhelmingly defeated "by a vote of 184,984 against and "43,829 for." According to the local accounts of the proposal, its intent was "to confiscate all land titles, "leaving owners and mortgagees "nothing but improvements and preferred rights to become tenants of "the State."

The San Francisco Chronicle says of the result in California:

> While California probably outranks even Kansas as a cranky and uncertain State, the overwhelming vote by which the single-tax humbug is snowed under proves that the mass of the people, at any rate, are not utterly clean gone daft. There is somewhere a boundary line beyond which reason still holds sway. And the single-tax humbug is far outside of it.

These defeats of the single tax are only items in a long list which suggest that the country is theoretically in favor of many so-called progressive proposals, but practically is opposed to their enforcement. There are scores of cases in which the initiative, the referendum, the recall, and many measures in the same class have been voted for, and upon experience voted against. The Chronicle testily proposes that California shall protect itself against continuous torment > by providing in the State Constitution that no vote shall hereafter be taken on this question except at moderate and reasonable intervals—say once every fifty years.

> The single tax, as presented at the recent election in all its nakedness, is shockingly wicked and wretchedly absurd. It proposes that the public shall sequester, without compensation, property which it once sold and got the money for. It assumes as a social crime that any land shall not be fully occupied, when, if there were actual occupants for all the land, there would be no room on earth for more human beings.
> It is entirely within reason that the electorate shall protect itself from social disorder of all kinds. And an initiative petition for the single tax is an aggravated symptom of social disorder.

California may have gone Progressive by hundreds of thousands on a candidate of Progressive views, but California feels different when it is a question of concrete application of current delusions.

OUR TREATY WITH NICARAGUA.

Nine years ago, at a Peace Conference in Washington, held at the suggestion of our Government, provision was made for the establishment of a Central American Court of Justice. The purpose of this conference was to put an end, if possible, to the wars from which the five republics had suffered great loss. In 1908 the court began its work, and its first decision prevented a war. There is danger now that this tribunal, which should be preserved, will be wrecked. Its dissolution would probably be followed by a war in which at least four of the republics would be involved.

But it can be saved, and by our Government. It was created for the adjustment of disputes that might lead to war. The controversy which threatens its existence relates to our new treaty with Nicaragua. Against this treaty, before the ratification of it, Costa Rica, Salvador, Honduras, and Guatemala protested at Washington. Afterward they appealed to the court, in proceedings against Nicaragua, and the court's decision was in their favor. It held that Nicaragua had not respected their rights in agreeing to and ratifying the treaty. Nicaragua, although her representative in the court had voted on the question, declined to accept the judgment.

It was provided in the treaty by which the court was established that it might consider any international question which by special agreement between one of the republics and a foreign Government should be submitted to it. Therefore our Government, by agreement with Nicaragua, can go before the court on the question of the treaty. If it should do so, however, the court's decision could be foreseen. It would be against the treaty, which we should be required to annul. In all probability, however, this result can be avoided, the court can be saved, and war can be prevented, by additional new agreements between our Government and the protesting republics, agreements or treaties which should have been made when the treaty with Nicaragua was negotiated by Mr. BRYAN. There is evidence that such agreements would not be opposed by the complainants, at least one of whom has a good case. The court should be saved. It has done good work. With it would go the annual Central American Conferences, which have been very useful. The loss of the treaty would not be a heavy price to pay for the preservation of the court and for prevention of war. But the treaty can be saved, with the court, and war can be averted.

NEW FORMS OF PROTECTION.

Hitherto protection has been a domestic policy, stopping at the ocean's edge like politics. Hereafter it is to have its range extended by our foreign friends. They have learned how to improve upon what we taught them, and how to apply the policy to merchandising as well as to production. For example, the Federal Trade Commission has urged that copper producers should be allowed to combine to place themselves upon an equality with German buyers. They buy unitedly, whereas our selling is done competitively. The result is that foreigners buy our products lower than we can buy them for ourselves. There is reason to suppose that this practice will be extended in Germany, the buying abroad being aggregated and regulated so that it will assume a national, if not an official, character. Thus German buyers of miscellaneous products would not buy each for himself, but would place orders with a central purchasing agency. The result would be that buyers would have the advantages of large-scale business, getting wholesale reductions, and incidentally enabling the purchasing agency to direct the buying in directions which would do most good to German production. If an order were placed to import any foreign-made article of German manufacture the central agency would be able to direct the business toward the home seller.

This is an example of German efficiency, working in methods which we punish with fines. We have our choice to retaliate or to use the same methods ourselves. World trade is shaping itself toward retaliation rather than reciprocity. This is regrettable, and it is desirable that some line should be drawn before actual collision occurs. The benefits of combination are so great that they should not be forbidden so long as the combination works in ethical and economic ways. We have practiced protection so long that it does not lie with us to object to it while it remains protection, and does not put on a likeness to aggression. Only "unfair" competition is objectionable. It is difficult to say that it is unfair to combine to buy cheaply or to promote home trade. It would be more reasonable to do the same rather than to whimper, and build barriers to protect inefficiency. It is absurd that the wealthiest nation in the world should regard itself as unable to compete with those crippled and impoverished by the war which has enriched it.

We may smash all our trusts if we like, but we cannot smash the foreign trusts. And after we have smashed our trusts we may appreciate the lesson taught by the Federal Trade Commission that they are our defenders in foreign trade, and that in smashing them we have only laid ourselves open to attack. Home and foreign trusts alike are tolerable so long as their conduct is good. The method of combination is nothing, a mere form. The practice of the combination is everything. It is idle to conduct a crusade against the forms of business. All that concerns Government is that the forms of business shall not be used contrary to the custom of good merchants. It cannot yet be said that there is any merchant law regarding the approximation of international trade to trade between individuals. The precedents are in process of formation. None should be allowed to assume form to our prejudice, but it is becoming to be sure that we are prejudiced before we protest. We have done good business with Germany, and we want to do good business with her hereafter. If we want her to buy we must allow her to sell. That is the same thing as saying that if we want to sell we also must buy. Protection which assumes the guise of prohibition hurts both buyers and sellers on both sides the ocean. Live and let live is a good trade policy.

THE VILLA ALATINI.

The municipality of Saloniki, where the patriotic Hellenic impulse to bring Greece into the war on the side of the Entente was first translated into deed, has revoked its gift, made to the King of the Hellenes after the Balkan wars, when he was still a national hero and constitutional King, of the Villa Alatini and Niaousa Forest. CONSTANTINE's "ingratitude" is cited as the reason for the cancellation of the deed of gift. No doubt the King is grateful in his way, but his gratitude is "a lively sense of favors to come" from Brother-in-law WILHELM and the Central Powers.

Was it not shortsightedness on the part of the Saloniki city fathers to take the Villa Alatini away from the King? There was the home of ABDUL HAMID II.'s exile. He, too, was a good German. He, too, was a little careless about the Constitution. So his ungrateful people deported him. Possibly the Hellenes will yet have use for the Villa Alatini as a permanent ex-royal residence. Or there is the Kaiser's Achilleion, his no longer, in Corfu.

There is no telling to what basenesses popular ingratitude will sink in these parlous times. A few years ago, after the appearance in The London Telegraph of the famous interview with the Kaiser, relating to his dispatch to London in the Boer war, when all Germany was aflame with hatred of England and the Boer national hymn was sung every night in theatres and restaurants, a Socialist in the Reichstag made indecent reference to the Villa Alatini, and said that the King of England would have been locked up in Balmoral if he had outraged the national feeling as had the Kaiser.

The German Socialists have learned to sing small since war began, but Greece, so many of whose citizens have lived in the United States, has strong democratic symptoms. Does the Villa Alatini await another discharged royalty? If CONSTANTINE escapes on account of old merit or by favor, FERDINAND of Bulgaria, now strutting his little hour, may yet come to be a lodger in Saloniki.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

We Have Ceased to Thrill.

That the world is hearing, if not exactly with indifference, at least without very vehemently expressed indignation, about the present expatriations of Belgians, can be explained only under the psychological law that any stimulus, when too often and too long applied, ceases to produce either nervous or muscular response.

What is in progress is nothing less than the reduction to literal, unmitigated slavery, not of an uncouth and inferior race, but of a people both civilized and courageous and lacking only the numbers that alone, in a war like this one, make military prowess effective. Such things have been done in the past, and not infrequently, but it was in the remote past, and a return to the ancient practice had ceased long since to be considered a possibility. But now the old ruthlessness is revived!

In a way the removal of the Belgian workers to Germany, where each will release from civil employment a man to increase the Kaiser's armies, is an atrocity worse than those that marked the original violation of Belgium's neutrality. The horrors of massacre and murder are missing in this later exemplification of "military necessity," but the cruelty is greater, the agonies are more prolonged, and the violation of international law is not less. The excuses given for it—a fear lest the Belgian artisans lose their skill through idleness and become demoralized through the acceptance of charity—are so obviously invalid, and the real reason is so apparent, that only the callousness acquired through hearing for two years of one like proceeding after another accounts for the comparative calmness with which the world learns of these removals.

Protests, indeed, are made here and there, and, as always, the voice of Cardinal MERCIER is heard in bold denunciation of the oppressors and exploiters of his land, but there is no general excitement and still less of expectation that the protests will be effective. It passes as merely another addition to an already endless list, and the difference it makes in the full score is hardly appreciable.

A College with Many Instructors.

Anybody who imagines that interesting reading matter is not presented in the trade papers, or even that such interest as they do command is confined to the narrow circle of specialists to whom each of these journals appeals, will revise his opinion after a thoughtful perusal of some advice given to its own particular circle by The Modern Merchant and Grocery World. Surely one doesn't have to be a grocer to be deeply stirred as to his emotions on reading these earnest and lucid lines:

> Consumers are being educated today by a variety of conditions to pay good prices for everything they buy. The retail merchant who doesn't take advantage of that had better drop out. Never again will he have such a chance.

No member of the multitude included in the term "consumers" can doubt that for some time he has been subjected to exactly such a course of education as is herein described. They have not yet arrived, indeed, at the point of really enjoying the payment of what the guide, philosopher, and friend of the grocers calls "good prices for everything they buy," but that may come in time, as is said to be the case with eels after they have been taught with sufficient thoroughness the delights that lie in being skinned.

But the hortatory part of the article quoted is somewhat mysterious. Apparently the Wise One who conducts The Modern Merchant and Grocery World is afraid that not all of the retailers are taking the hearty and persistent part they should in the educational campaign from which he foresees such beneficent results. So far as any consumer has noticed, there has been no such negligence. If it exists—if any grocer has failed to make the enforced elevation of a few prices the excuse, or rather the reason, for raising prices on everything he sells—of course no condemnation could be too severe. As The Modern Merchant and Grocery World well says, the present opportunity to do away with the very memory of low prices is far too good to be missed. To name the villains who are doing it was an obvious duty. Reformed Sing Sing is not harsh enough adequately to punish their sins.

Take Lives, Though Not Money.

Most noticeable in Sunday's list of automobile accidents, so called, was one in which a stolen car going at the rate of forty miles an hour on the Roslyn Road was wrecked. Two of its six occupants were killed, one walked hastily away as soon as he could pick himself up from the ground, where he had been thrown, and the three other participants in what was evidently the wildest kind of a joy ride righted the machine and rode off, only to abandon it a few miles away.

This, of course, was not an "automobile accident" in any proper sense of that phrase; it was merely the disastrous end of an excursion that involved several kinds of lawbreaking, and must therefore be classed as distinctly criminal. That the consequences—apart from the money loss to the owner of the misused car—were confined to those who were riding in it was merely a matter of luck. Such driving of automobiles threatens the safety of the people in every other automobile met or passed by the joy riders, and constitutes a danger far greater than that to which travelers were exposed in the days when highway robbery was a profession not wholly inglorious, and its abler members ended on the gallows, indeed, but as popular heroes.

The highwayman has now almost disappeared, and no glamour of romance is thrown around the few perpetuators of the old industry. But his place as a peril of the roads has been more than filled by men who, though not much given to presenting the demand of "Your money or your life," do manage to make the country roads far more unsafe than did DICK TURPIN and the various "Captains" of the coaching era, and also to take more lives.

Dr. Eaton's Position.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is certainly regrettable to read of such an eminent member of the clergy as Dr. Eaton attacking President Wilson's foreign policy, and, moreover, it is more than difficult to accept his statement that he would have "avenged" the sinking of the Lusitania if it cost "ten million men." What about the millions of women and children dependent on these men? Forget, if you will, the men and the cities and the civilization, but remember the sorrows and sufferings of the women and children! L. B.

Newark, Nov. 13, 1916.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is with some interest that I read the article in this morning's TIMES on "Dr. Eaton Attacks Wilson," in which he says that "if it took the lives of ten million men, we should have avenged the hundred lives lost on the Lusitania." Let us hope that Dr. Eaton's disciples will not follow in his footsteps, and that despite the "attacks" of our divine leaders our beloved President will lead us a tiny step nearer the brotherhood of man. Accidents on Riverside Drive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The infraction of the motor vehicle law on Broadway and Riverside Drive extends practically from Seventy-second to 106th Street, with periodical, serious accidents resulting. The most recent, perhaps, was the injury to Mrs. Emerson at Eighty-third Street and Riverside Drive. The drive is used for all intents and purposes as a speedway and also as a route for omnibuses, and is sparsely supplied with traffic police. Pedestrians wishing to board a downtown omnibus are compelled to cross to the west side of the drive. This brings them in the track of the procession of motor cars speeding north and south. Inquiry develops the fact that there is no ordinance in connection with omnibuses similar to that in the case of street railway cars, compelling motor car drivers to pull up when approaching the rear of an omnibus which has stopped to take on passengers. Unless such an ordinance goes into effect accidents of this kind will continue indefinitely. In order to procure such an ordinance it will be necessary for the residents in the section named to organize, co-operate with the Police Department, and apply to the city authorities for such an ordinance.

History and Sentiment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some one of the intensely pro-Ally partisans is continually reminding us that the British blocked the German game in Manila Bay. It was fine and fortunate for us, but does any one in sober thought imagine that the British interference with the German Admiral's program was done out of altruistic friendship? Even in 1898 there was in Europe a premonition of the coming struggle for world power, for the opportunity for colonization, and the German and British actions in Manila Bay were no doubt the results of the councils in Berlin and London. To attribute the action of the British commander to a fraternal spirit is, to use an obsolete but expressive term, "guff." We should be, perhaps, more grateful for the event, but in the interest of historical common sense, let us not be sentimentally and unduly grateful for the motive.

German Division.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Today's editorial in THE TIMES on the German Chancellor's peace speech is so very good that I venture to call the attention of its writer to the chapter on "The French Scare of 1875" in the "Memoirs of M. de Blowitz." I cannot but feel that the strange division of the German Government into two unrelated camps, the military and that having control of all other affairs, is as strong today as it was in 1875, and in 1890 when I lived there for some time. Your editorial and de Blowitz's chapter dovetailed together perfectly.

COL. HARVEY'S GRADE.

Passes an Examination for Major Prophet with a Mark of 76.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the general tendency to belittle Colonel George Harvey as an election forecaster permit me to say a word in his defense.

Colonel Harvey predicted that Mr. Hughes would carry twenty-three specified States. Mr. Hughes actually carried fourteen of them. I therefore award Colonel Harvey a mark of 61 per cent. on prediction. As 60 per cent. is generally accepted in colleges as a passing mark, it is evident that Colonel Harvey has a margin of safety of 1 per cent. Not a large margin, truly, but margins are being cut smaller this year.

Colonel Harvey expected that Mr. Hughes would carry Indiana and Wisconsin. The doughty Colonel thus scores 100 per cent. on expectation. It is clear that, if he had expected more and predicted less, Mr. Hughes would have been elected.

Colonel Harvey believed Mr. Hughes would carry Delaware, Ohio, and Maryland. We give him 33 per cent. on belief. This is his only failure. Faith is generally regarded as a virtue, but Colonel Harvey's faith falls little short of credulity.

Colonel Harvey allotted thirteen specified States to President Wilson. He gets 10 per cent. on allotment. He regarded seven States as doubtful. The fact that President Wilson carried six of them does not militate against Colonel Harvey's original right to an honest doubt. We are compelled, therefore, to mark him 100 per cent. on doubt.

Colonel Harvey's final statement was: "Hughes surely wins. Probable majority for Hughes between 145 and 175." This staggered me at first, but on reflection I perceived that he was speaking of Minnesota and inadvertently omitted to mention the name of the State. We think 10 per cent. a fair debit for this omission, and we deduct an additional 5 per cent. for inaccuracy, as the Minnesota figures now stand at a little over 200. We therefore award him 85 per cent. on Minnesota.

The candidate's (not the 100 per cent. candidate) general average is, therefore, 76 per cent.—a high mark. For it is a familiar principle of weather lore that all signs fail in dry weather; and this has been an exceedingly arid campaign.

We maintain that on this showing Colonel Harvey is entitled to rank as one of the Major Prophets.

A. B. MAVITY.

No Reunion of Republicans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article, "Votes for Women and Bull Moose Elect Wilson," splendidly analyzes the situation, but I take exception to one statement therein, namely, that the breach in New York and New Jersey is apparently healed. Without fear of contradiction, I can state that the Progressives of New York, with very few exceptions, voted for Wilson, in the first place as protest against the betrayal of Roosevelt; on the other hand being convinced that the Republican Party of today is more reactionary than ever. A few leaders for personal gain or to satisfy their ambitions left the party, but the rank and file is still against the Republican Party, and will be so in the future. Of course, the Progressives could not show their hands, because Hughes received a good many Democratic votes in opposition to his foreign policy. There was no and there will be no reunion with the Republicans.

A PROGRESSIVE WHO IS STILL ENROLLED AS SUCH.

The Answer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is most amusing to read the alibis advanced by Republican leaders for the defeat of Mr. Hughes, ranging from the alleged treachery of Hiram Johnson to the ridiculous theory of one of the evening papers, that several Western States were swung by Mormon votes. It galls them to realize that the sun can shine, that the country can be prosperous, and that the American people can be satisfied under a Democratic Administration, but that is the answer. The seal of public approval has been put on efficiency as represented by Mr. Wilson, who has governed for all the people and for no particular group or section. It is an inspiring victory for those who hold firm in their belief that we can have government for all the people without catering to special interests, and it should prove the death knell to the reactionary element in both parties.

Election Prophets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the article in THE TIMES of last Sunday, entitled "Election Prophets Were All at Sea," it might be of interest to call attention to the prophecy made by former Aqueduct Commissioner Ernest Harvier, a man noted for close predictions on the outcome of the vote of Greater New York. His prophecy this year appeared in the newspapers Nov. 6, and the result proved his estimates to be very nearly correct, being less than 100 in Richmond, less than 200 in the Bronx, and 700 in Brooklyn.

DE PROFUNDIS.

There come tense moments in the lives of men
When they are moved to ponder once again
On mighty matters, with big meanings fraught.
All lesser happenings become as naught
And take their natural and proper place
As trifles in those moments when we face
Big issues; and the tongue cannot give speech
At times like these. Of what avail to preach
Preparedness? The time for that has past—
We know the folly of delay at last.

And so we gathered round with bated breath
And solemn thoughts, and silence as of death;
As, sliding to our cellar through a hole,
We watched the passage of

PRICE OF SEA CONTROL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Nov. 8 you published a wireless message from Berlin purporting to give statistics concerning the war losses sustained by the British Navy to date. This message obviously emanated from the foreign branch of the official Wolff's Telegraph Bureau, which has sufficient candor to print on its letterheads a note to the effect that it does not guarantee the accuracy of any item of news it circulates.

In the interest of truth, may I crave a little space in order to correct and supplement the naval statistics given in the message referred to? It states that the British loss in battleships and cruisers alone now stands at 501,790 tons—a willful exaggeration of the actual total to the extent of nearly 150,000 tons. The following is a complete list of all the British battleships and cruisers which have been lost to date: Audacious, King Edward VII., Triumph, Bulwark, Formidable, Irresistible, Ocean, Goliath, Russell, Majestic, Queen Mary, Indefatigable, Invincible, Defence, Warrior, Black Prince, Natal, Hampshire, Argyll, Good Hope, Monmouth, Aboukir, Cressy, Hogue, Nottingham, Falmouth, Arethusa, Amphion, Hawke, Pathfinder, Hermes, Pegasus—aggregate displacement 386,765 tons. In addition about thirty destroyers (not fifty) and twenty-five submarines (not seventy-six) have been lost.

For purposes of comparison it is worth while to set forth the corresponding German losses, about which Berlin maintains an eloquent silence. The following list takes into consideration only those losses which have been positively verified, and deals only with battleships and cruisers: "A" (Kaiser class), "B" (Kaiser class), Westfalen, "C" (Deutschland class), Pommern, Lützow, Seydlitz, Von der Tann, Blücher, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Yorck, Friedrich Karl, Prinz Adalbert, Wiesbaden, Rostock, Frankfurt, Elbing, Karlsruhe, Magdeburg, Köln, Mainz, Emden, Dresden, Nürnberg, Königsberg, Leipzig, Bremen, Frauenlob, Undine, Ariadne, Hela, Albatross—aggregate displacement 300,117 tons. In addition thirty to thirty-five German destroyers and 120 submarines have been lost. We should, perhaps, be justified in adding to the German list the Goeben (22,640 tons) and the Breslau (4,478 tons), for both these vessels, rusting at Constantinople, are lost to Germany for the duration of the war, and it is highly doubtful whether they will ever see Germany again.

With regard to the British list, it should be observed that, with one solitary exception, i. e., the Audacious, every battleship or cruiser that has been lost has been officially announced by the British Admiralty. A diametrically opposite policy has been pursued by the German Admiralty, which habitually conceals every loss unless the fact becomes known from neutral sources. It was not until survivors from the ships had been picked up by Danish and Dutch fishermen that Germany acknowledged the sinking of the giant battle cruiser Lützow and the cruisers Wiesbaden, Rostock, Elbing, and Frauenlob in the Jutland fight. As her own ships saved the survivors of the two Kaiser class battleships, the battle cruiser Seydlitz, (and almost certainly of the Hindenburg as well,) the loss of these not unimportant units was kept dark "for military reasons."

Few impartial naval experts who are in touch with all the facts would hesitate to add 50,000 tons or more to the total of German losses, but, as certain of these losses cannot be positively identified, I have refrained from inserting them in the list. It should be added that the British vessel Genista, sunk recently off Ireland, was not a cruiser at all, but a small mine-sweeper—one of the many hundred now engaged in keeping the seas open to friendly and neutral navigation.

I do not wish to minimize the British losses but I would point out that they represent the price paid for that command of the sea which is the Allies' greatest asset and the sure guarantee of their ultimate victory. Considering all that command of the sea implies, and its simple, vital significance in the present war, Great Britain has purchased it at a relatively small cost. Nor must it be forgotten that, in spite of these losses, the British Navy today is at least one-half as strong again in men and ships as it was on the outbreak of war.

What advantage, on the other hand, has Germany won to offset her 300,000 tons of lost naval shipping? She remains as tightly blockaded as ever before, and her one-time immense ocean-borne trade, which represented 60 per cent. of her entire revenue in peace time, has dwindled to a few hundred tons of rubber and nickel precariously carried by a submarine. Winston Churchill once drew upon himself the wrath of Teuton scribes by alluding to the German fleet as a "luxury." Has not the course of the war down to date absolutely vindicated his judgment?

The Douaumont Story.

Urgent Need for Help.

In three small scantily furnished rooms in an east side tenement a mother has been found patiently laboring to keep something resembling a home for her three little children. Life has been a continuous struggle without a glimmer of light for this unfortunate woman. Completely crushed and scarce understanding what it all meant, she has had the misery of seeing her once good husband develop insanity, which grew day by day more violent, and for which there was no cure. Beatings, cruelties beyond words, continual desertions, she endured until finally the day came when the afflicted man was taken away to an institution. The death of her fourth baby, the most acute poverty and suffering for herself and little girls, and never ending toil to keep them alive—such was her life. One of the children is a poor little cripple. The Charity Organization Society makes an urgent appeal for $150 to supply this unfortunate family with necessities during the Winter, and make life a little brighter for this mother, alone and friendless in New York. Gifts sent to the society's office at 105 East Twenty-second Street will be promptly acknowledged.

The following gifts sent in response to a previous appeal for another family are acknowledged with thanks: George G. McIntosh, $5; "Anonymous," $5; Miss Caroline Buck, $1; "Anonymous," $1; Miss Nellie Revell, $2; Mrs. Kate E. Bigiow, $5; Carl J. Hendricks, $1; Mrs. M. C. Eastwick, $10; "Cash," $2; Mrs. Samuel P. Blagden, $5; Hamilton Odell, $5; "C. K. H.," $3; Mrs. E. C. Davidson, $2; "Cash," $1; "F. S. S.," $1; Mrs. Adolf Liebman, $10; "Cash," $1; "K.," $1; "W. L. T.," $1; "Anonymous," $2; Mrs. R. C. Kerr, $5; Miss Jean MacDonald, $5; Mrs. G. S. Morris, $5; "Cash," $1; "E. M. S.," $1; Mrs. F. H. Howe, $1; "W. H.," $5; William Hampson, $5, and H. B. Ludlum, $25.

URGES LIQUOR WAR BY EPISCOPALIANS

CHURCH NEEDS MORE MONEY

Loan of $32,000 to Complete Bishop Greer's Residence Has Not Been Repaid.

After a brief communion service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the 133d annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, embracing the Boroughs of Manhattan, Richmond and the Bronx, and the counties on both sides of the river up to Newburg and Poughkeepsie, met yesterday morning in the Synod Hall at Amsterdam Avenue and 110th Street. Bishop David H. Greer presided, with Suffragan Bishop Charles R. Burch relieving him from time to time. There were about 400 clerical and lay delegates in attendance.

The principal points of dispute which are likely to arise in the three-day session of the convention were only touched upon yesterday. Chief among them is the temperance resolution introduced by the Rev. James V. Chalmers, rector of Holy Trinity Church, who for years has opposed the traffic in alcohol.

In the resolution he recites that Bishop Greer in the convention last year urged voluntary total abstinence for clergymen and laymen, and that the General Convention at St. Louis this year went on record as opposed to the liquor traffic. The resolution then reads:

"Resolved, That this convention, through its Social Service Commission, declares its readiness to co-operate with all active temperance forces in urging total abstinence, in endeavoring to have the present liquor laws enforced, and in favoring any legislation such as an optional prohibition bill which will give the people of this State in cities or towns a chance to speak for themselves on the question of license or no license."

The resolution, which had been referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Business, was reported favorably late in the afternoon and turned over to the Committee on the Dispatch of Business to be placed on the calendar. It will probably come up for action by the convention this afternoon.

The question of proportional representation for the larger parishes is another problem which will probably be decided at this session. The Committee on Proportionate Lay Representation recommended that the lay representation in future be one member from each church, with the following additions for larger membership: One additional delegate for each church of from 200 to 499 members, two for each from 500 to 899, three from 900 to 1,399, four from 1,400 to 1,999, five from 2,000 to 3,999, and six from 4,000 up. Each lay delegate would have one vote. The recommendations were referred to the Committee on Diocesan Canon.

Shephen Baker, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read a report asking for an appropriation of $32,000 for diocesan missions and Church extension, an increase of $3,000 over last year. The Rev. Alexander Y. Cummings, rector of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, said he did not object to this, but he felt it was a hardship on small parishes to be compelled to meet the assessments or lose their representation in the convention. Bishop Greer admitted the hardship, but said that this method of assessment must be enforced unless the larger and wealthier parishes contributed beyond the pro rata share.

Reports of various committees showed the need of additional funds for Church work, and there was considerable surprise when the trustees of the Episcopal Fund announced that the endowments on hand were not sufficient for the payment of salaries without additional help from contributions, and that a loan of $32,000 from the New York Life Insurance Company for the completion of Bishop Greer's residence on the Cathedral Grounds had not been repaid. The loan was due Nov. 25, 1915, but an extension until Nov. 25 of this year was granted by the company.

The Board of Managers of the Diocesan Missionary and Extension Society presented as their most immediate need two additional Fords to add to the seven already in use by its missionaries.

The principal addresses of the day were made in the morning by Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, who is at present on leave from his diocese to raise a fund of $5,000,000 for pensioning aged clergymen, their widows and orphans, and in the afternoon by Bishop Greer. Bishop Lawrence said that the fund raised so far amounted to $3,500,000, but that on account of interest charges about $2,000,000 more was needed.

Two new churches were admitted to the convention—St. Bartholomew's at White Plains and All Saints' at Harrison. The Rev. Charles K. Gilbert was re-elected secretary of the convention, and Richard M. Pott, a layman, was chosen treasurer. Today's meetings will begin with a religious service in the cathedral at 9 o'clock, and will continue with a business session in the Synod House at 10.

COFFEE BARS VS. SALOONS.

Business Men, at Convention, Discuss Suggestion of Minister.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 14.—Following the suggestion of the Rev. Dr. Mark Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, the National Coffee Roasters' Association, in annual convention here, will consider the advisability of establishing coffee houses in the more thickly populated centres of the country in competition with saloons.

The suggestion of Dr. Matthews was incorporated in the report of the publicity committee of the association, presented today by Charles Lewis of Cincinnati, and was followed by the adoption by the convention of the slogan "coffee as a substitute for liquor as a stimulant." The plan was received with considerable favor by delegates.

In connection with this report the announcement was made that the increase in the consumption of coffee had been the greatest in prohibition States. Dr. Carl L. Alsburg, chief of the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, told the delegates that the end of determining the purity of food products by the uncertain judgment of taste, smell, and sight was at hand. "The country seems to have lost sight of the fact that the pure food and drugs act was passed for something more than to establish food standards," Dr. Alsburg said.

Portraits of Children on View.

Following the example of our friends across the Atlantic, we are having an "Exhibition of Fair Children," although a less ambitious title is given it. At the Arden Galleries Mrs. John W. Alexander and Miss Averill have assembled a loan collection of portraits of children in painting and sculpture by American artists, ranging from the early work of the late William Chase to canvases by the younger artists that have been seen in recent exhibitions. One of the bright particular stars of the collection is Sargent's fine portrait of Mrs. Dave H. Morris as a young girl. The quality of the exhibition, which opens today, entitles it to a fuller review which will be given in a later issue.

STEFANSSON MAPS NEW ARCTIC LAND

Explorer Sends the First Direct Word in a Year of His Work in the Far North.

BEGINS HIS SURVEYS

TELLS OF FUTURE PLANS

Hints That Further News May Not Come from Him Until November, 1918.

From the arctic yesterday came the first direct news from Vilhjalmur Stefansson, head of the Canadian arctic expedition, received since, under date of Aug. 22, 1915, he announced the discovery of a new land at 78 degrees north latitude and 116 degrees west longitude, according to rough observations. The extent of the new land was undetermined. Since that time several members of the Southern Division of the Canadian expedition, under command of Dr. Rudolph M. Anderson, have returned home.

In the subjoined narrative Stefansson tells of exploring the new land. He indicates that he will continue his arctic work. "There would be no need to worry about us," he says, "because of mere lack of news, before November, 1918." The Stefansson expedition started from Nome, Alaska, in July, 1913.

In chronological order the messages from Stefansson are given below:

By VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON.

Special to The New York Times.

BANKS ISLAND, Jan. 15, 1916.—The Polar Bear, one of the vessels of the expedition, with eleven whites and thirteen Eskimos, at Kellett base, on the afternoon of Sept. 3, 1915, attempted the rounding of Cape Kellett, going north, but was prevented by heavy ice brought down by the northwest winds of the previous night and forenoon. For a full month previous to Sept. 3 there was no ice on this portion of the coast. On account of freezing temperature and northwest winds we headed southeast to try reaching Melville Island by way of Prince of Wales Strait, but were stopped by heavy ice on the Victoria Island coast, ten miles east of Princess Royal Island.

We are wintering on the ship, sheltered by grounded ice, and are not in danger before the ice moves in the Summer of 1916. There was a freeze-up around both Kellett and Victoria Island on Sept. 7, but Melville Sound and the coasts of Banks and Victoria Island were not frozen for the first week of October. I sent a party to survey as much as convenient of the northeast coast of Victoria Island—one sled with Storkersen and Hermann Kilian and one sled with Charles Anderson and Noice for support. The party left Storkersen all well at Hornby Point on Oct. 24 and got back to the Polar Bear on Nov. 2. Storkersen expected to advance ten days further, and consequently was not home on Nov. 16, when I left for Kellett to get sleds being made by Benards there. We established a hunting party of five Eskimos at Ramsay Island, visited Prince Albert Sound, coasted south of Banks Island, and arrived at Kellett on Dec 15, where all was well.

I learned here that Wilkins with the North Star [another vessel with the expedition] was wintering on the west coast of Banks Island, 74 degrees north latitude, but was unable to proceed further because the ice north of there had not moved all the Summer. This condition was different from last year, when all the ice went abroad and stayed off until late September.

Explorer Tells of Plans.

I shall conduct two separate exploring parties in the Spring of 1916—one of four sleds and six men, probably commanded by Storkersen, to go west and north-northwest from Cape Alfred, and the other, probably commanded by myself, with four teams, to explore the new land discovered last year. The ice party should leave Cape Alfred by the first quarter of the March moon and be back at Banks Island by the middle of June. Of my party three men should return to the Polar Bear in June, but the other three will not try to return unless the area has been fully explored to 83 degrees north latitude and 145 degrees west longitude.

Otherwise, we shall spend the Summer in the new land or on Melville Island, putting up meat, and marking advance positions for dog feed in 1917. In the event of our nonreturn the Polar Bear will attempt getting north to pick us up and we shall meet here then or hunt there up to the early part of the following Winter. Should the work be completed as stated above we shall try coming home in 1916, and the southern section and some members of the northern section will go home anyway.

Should the Polar Bear penetrate to Melville Island or further north, she will attempt returning by the Atlantic or Pacific route, according to the convenience of the plan of maintaining a reserve base at Kellett to retreat upon in case of the wreck of the Polar Bear further north. There would be no need to worry about us because of mere lack of news before November, 1918.

V. STEFANSSON.

Describes the New Land.

NORTH LATITUDE 78 DEGREES, WEST LONGITUDE 116 DEGREES, [No date.]—Because of a misunderstanding, resulting in lack of co-operation between the ships Polar Bear and North Star, the work of moving had to be postponed till the Spring of 1917.

The survey of the new land was well begun. From hills a thousand feet high, inland from Cape Murray, water and sky can be seen trending first north-northeast ten miles, then northwest thirty miles, (estimated,) but the coast line cannot be distinguished because it is low and snow has covered it.

The support party returns today, Storkersen, Thomsen, Kilian, and Illum. The advance party left Cape Murray yesterday, following the coast north. The members are Castle, Noice, and Andersen, with one sled.

I shall follow in two days with the Eskimos Natkusiak and Emiu, and two sleds, expecting to return to Melville Island, north end, by July 20, but may spend the whole Summer in the new land if it proves extensive. The men and dogs are living mainly on game, and will probably continue to do so, but we have about a thousand pounds of food and two hundred of kerosene, in case meat and blubber should prove scarce.

We have twenty-five dogs here, and the support parties take back nineteen dogs. The dogs average much poorer than in previous years, the loads being only 125 pounds per dog, the maximum average in ordinary going.

The Polar Bear has orders to meet us if possible at Melville Island next August, to winter there. Storkersen, with three Eskimos' families, will spend the Summer drying meat and skins in Melville Island, for food and clothing for Spring expeditionary work in 1917, should the Bear not reach Melville Island or be wrecked.

My last news from the Polar Bear was in the first week in March, at which time all were well. Engineer Jones died without warning of heart disease Nov. 22. People of the Star were transferred to the Polar Bear for one year. The Star and Sach will not be launched before the Spring of 1917.

All well with the exploratory body, except that I sprained an ankle badly a week ago and may not be able to walk for some weeks. I am riding with my foot strapped to a board and leaving a sled only occasionally to take compass bearings. The conditions are annoying, but not serious. Wild game continues abundant, for Natkusiak is a good hunter and the others will learn.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

Works by Reger, Beethoven, and Franck at the First Concert.

Crowded as the current musical season is, and filled as it is with offerings of importance, the first concert of the Kneisel Quartet, given last evening in Aeolian Hall, was welcomed with obvious eagerness by a large audience. It was an audience distinguished by a fine musical taste and appreciation in seeing in this series of concerts one of the most notable contributions to the city's musical activities. The Kneisel Quartet's performance last evening was on its highest level of mastery in all the particulars that go to make perfection in quartet playing. The program began with Max Reger's quartet in E flat, Op. 109; though no mention of the fact was made, there was the evident intention of doing honor to the memory of the composer, who died since the close of the last musical season.

The quartet is not new to these audiences, though it is not familiar. There is that about it which seems to preclude anything like familiarity, though it is one of the best of the too numerous works of the late composer, who died at the age of forty-three, leaving something more than 130 numbered compositions. Its interest and its musical value increase through its four movements from the first allegro, which is singularly vague and unsubstantial in its material, and throughout its elaborate development gives little for the listener to lay hold of. There is a shadowy charm in the delicate and fleeting presto; in the larghetto, for the first time, is there a suggestion of sensuous tonal beauty, though here, too, the specifically musical ideas are elusive. Reger, the contrapuntal expert, appears all through these three movements; but he casts off all restraint in the last and writes a stoutly developed fugue for his last movement on a subject that looks backward a century and a half.

It is worked with a multitude of the resources that the newer art has added to the older, and finally leaves the stricter style for a close that makes a freer and more imaginative use of the foregoing material.

There was lively appreciation for everything that followed the first movement, and real enthusiasm at the end. But one may shudder to think what would be made of this composition by playing less finished, less balanced, and less accurate in intonation than that which Mr. Kneisel and his associates devoted to it.

Beethoven's quartet in D, the third of Op. 18, followed: the one of the six that is perhaps least often played, though it has a grace and a capricious beauty of its own that were genially embodied in the performance. César Franck's pianoforte quintet was the third number, one of the noblest products of the composer's genius, a genius that Mr. Kneisel has done his share to make realized and appreciated. Mme. Olga Samaroff played the pianoforte part with sincerity and devotion, in which she matched her associates, and with a fitting sense of proportion in the ensemble; though a finer tone and a broader sweep of imagination would have been to the benefit of the whole.

MME. FRANCES ALDA SINGS.

Opera Soprano's Annual Recital in Carnegie Hall a Gala Occasion.

Mme. Frances Alda of the Metropolitan Opera Company gave her annual song recital at Carnegie Hall last night. She sang a group of numbers in the older style, a group that was made up of two new songs in Finnish, two songs of Grieg, and Strauss's "Cäcilie," five songs in French, three of which were new works by Sibella and Fourdrain, and five songs in English, which included two new songs by Frank La Forge, the accompanist of the evening, and Coleridge-Taylor's "Life and Death."

Mme. Alda's audience was a large one, ushers staggered under the weight of flowers that were sent up to the stage to do her honor, and there were all the accompaniments of a gala occasion. The singer herself was in good voice, and has probably never been heard to better advantage in a recital here. She did a good deal of fine singing of that type where vocal qualities are distinguished above the desire to portray the deeper moods or express strongly marked feeling. This seems to be her forte as a lyric soprano, and one within which she consciously holds herself for the present, if one may judge of her intentions by the program, an excellent one.

When her voice is at its best it has an evenness and flexibility in the upper portions that is capable of producing excellent results, and this was often in evidence. It was marred only by a tinge of acidity that often goes with the light voices, and a certain unsteadiness in the lower range. Her style was tasteful and effective in producing the results desired. Mr. La Forge played the accompaniments most excellently.

'The Yellow Jacket' Three Mornings

Three morning performances of "The Yellow Jacket," the Hazelton-Benrimo play being presented at a series of special performances at the Cort Theatre, have been arranged for next Saturday, the following Saturday, and Thanksgiving Day. These will be given for the benefit of teachers and others who cannot attend the matinées. Mr. and Mrs. Coburn are trying to obtain a playhouse in which the play can be presented regularly.

Kurt Schindler, musical director of the Schola Cantorum, and Miss Vera Androuchevitch were married quietly yesterday morning at City Hall. Only the necessary witnesses attended the ceremony.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Francois Kleinberger gave a dinner for them at the St. Regis. The guests sat at a large table, which was decorated with roses and lilies of the valley and a large wedding cake. Among those at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Haan, Miss Hortense Haan, Emile Sperling, Stephen Bourgois, Willard Gray, and Joseph Haan.

She arrived last week on the Kristianiafjord from Bergen after a ten days' trip through Russia, traveling in all several thousand miles. Mr. Schindler has been the director of the Schola Cantorum for several seasons, and is also associated with the Schirmer Music Publishing Company.

He was abroad when the war began and several times was reported to have been shot while fighting for the Fatherland. He spent the early Summer of 1914 traveling in Russia. In Berlin, following the declaration of war, he was mistaken for a Russian spy because of the Russian labels pasted on his luggage.

The bride's father for many years has been administrator of the Municipal Opera House of Odessa. Mr. Schindler first met his bride when he was visiting Russia, collecting material for publication of Russian folk songs, some of which were heard last season.

After a few years of widowhood Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., married Captain Maldwin Drummond of the British Army. His only brother, Marshall Field, 3d, was married in January, 1915, to Miss Evelyn Marshall, daughter of the late Charles W. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall of this city, after a romantic courtship which began while both were passengers on the Lusitania en route to this country. Mr Field receives a large income from the estate of his grandfather, the principal of which was left in trust.

LOVING CUP FOR T. E. KIRBY.

Art Association Employes Honor Auctioneer on 70th Birthday.

Following the close of the Metzgar sale of Japanese prints at the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon, Thomas E. Some of the employes have been with the association for twenty and thirty years. There has always been a warm feeling of co-operation among American Art Association workers, and there was much feeling shown as the cup was presented to Mr. Kirby. On the cup in raised letters were the words:

"Presented to Thomas E. Kirby on his seventieth birthday, Nov. 14, 1916, by the employes of his American Art Association as a token of their admiration and affection."

There was a group photograph of the members of the association staff for Mr. Kirby, with an engrossed paper with the signatures. ROBT. G. VALENTINE, LABOR ARBITER, DIES

Massachusetts Wage Board Chairman Is Stricken Suddenly in Delmonico's.

FORMER INDIAN OFFICIAL

As Commissioner Under Taft He Had a Controversy with Catholics Over the Garb of School Teachers.

Robert G. Valentine, formerly Commissioner of Indian Affairs under President Taft and more recently known for his work as an industrial counselor in settling labor disputes, died suddenly from heart disease early yesterday morning in his apartment at the Hotel Manhattan. He was dining with friends at Delmonico's when he complained of feeling ill and was taken to the hotel by his friends. Dr. McIntyre, the house physician, was sent for, but Mr. Valentine was dead when he arrived.

He was born in West Newton, Mass., and was in his forty-fifth year. Mr. Valentine was graduated from Harvard University in 1896, and then became an assistant in the English Department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and remained there until 1899. Later, during 1899-1901, Mr. Valentine was connected with the National City Bank of this city, and for some time was in the accounting department of the Union Pacific Railway at Omaha, Neb. During 1901-02, Mr. Valentine again taught English at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and then joined the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company here. In 1905 he became private secretary to Francis E. Leupp, Commissioner of the Indian Service.

Mr. Valentine was appointed Supervisor of Indian Schools in 1908, and on Dec. 1 of that year was made Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Six months later he was appointed to the full commissionership and served until Sept. 12, 1912. In 1913 Mr. Valentine was appointed Chairman of the First Massachusetts Minimum Wage Board.

While in charge of Indian Affairs Mr. Valentine became the centre of a religious controversy that attracted wide attention. An order was given that the teachers in the schools should not wear the garb of any religious order, and this brought Mr. Valentine into conflict with officials of the Roman Catholic Church, who wished their teachers to wear the priestly garments. The Protestants, on the other hand, fought against this and strove to have all teachers in the Indian schools without affiliations with religious orders. For a time it was said that Mr. Valentine and President Taft differed on the question, and that the Indian Commissioner would be forced to resign. Mr. Valentine, however, only resigned in September, 1912, when he wished to join Theodore Roosevelt in the formation of the Progressive Party.

He was a member of the firm of Valentine, Tead & Gregg, efficiency experts, of Boston, and of recent years had given all his time to settling labor disputes. In his capacity as Chairman of the Massachusetts Minimum Wage Board and as one of a committee working with the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations, Mr. Valentine was active in settling a number of the most serious strikes in Boston, among which were the telephone and elevated railway strikes. At the time of his death he was working on a readjustment of conditions in the cloak and suit makers' industry in this city.

In 1904 Mr. Valentine married Miss Sophia French of South Braintree, Mass., who survives him.

HENRY GEORGE, JR., DEAD.

Ex-Congressman, the Son of Single Taxer, Dies in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Former Congressman Henry George, son of Henry George of single tax fame, died here today after a long illness. He formerly represented the Seventeenth and Twenty-first Congressional Districts of New York. He was 54 years old and maintained his home in New York City.

Henry George, Jr., was born in Sacramento, Cal., and received his education in the public schools. At the age of 16 he entered a printing office, where he learned the rudiments of newspaper work. He left the printing office at the age of 17 and became private secretary for his father, then famous for his work as a political economist and reformer. In 1884 he accompanied his father as his secretary on his lecture tour of Great Britain. At the close of the tour, Mr. George joined the staff of London Truth. Not long after this he returned to this country and later joined the staff of The North American Review.

In 1887 his father founded The Standard for the purpose of promoting his single tax theories, and he made Mr. George its managing editor. This connection continued until 1891, when Mr. George went to Washington, D. C., as correspondent for a syndicate of Western newspapers. A year later he became English correspondent for the same syndicate, remaining abroad until 1893, when he returned and became managing editor of The Florida Citizen of Jacksonville, Fla.

In 1895, Mr. George resigned this position to help his father, then in the zenith of his career, and since that time had written extensively on labor, single tax, socialism and other topics for many newspapers.

When his father suddenly died in 1897, in the heat of the Mayoralty campaign, Mr. George was nominated to succeed him as candidate of the Jeffersonian Party for Mayor of Greater New York, but was defeated. Mr. George, in 1911, was elected to Congress from the Seventeenth New York District. He was re-elected in 1913 from the Twenty-first District, and served until the expiration of his term in 1915.

During 1909, Mr. George made a trip around the world and acted as correspondent for Collier's Weekly and other periodicals, after which he went to England.

C. G. GALT A SUICIDE.

Mrs. Wilson's Nephew Takes Poison in Washington Street.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Carroll Grayson Galt, 27 years of age, son of the late Walter A. Galt and nephew of the late Norman Galt, died at the Emergency Hospital today, half an hour after he was found at 1421 G Street, where he declared he had taken poison because he wanted to die. Norman Galt, the youth's uncle, was the first husband of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President.

Shortly after 11 o'clock this morning young Galt appeared in the rooms of the U. S. Poster Company, at the address mentioned, where his conduct aroused the suspicion of an employe, who asked him why he was handling a bottle marked "poison." Galt replied that the bottle contained something he was taking on account of illness. He left the rooms of the Poster company and wandered into a saloon, where he asked the proprietor to summon an ambulance, explaining that he had taken poison.

Galt was conscious when the ambulance arrived. When asked by the surgeon why he had taken poison he replied: "I wanted to die."

Young Galt was formerly a student at the University of Virginia and lived at Chevy Chase, Md., a suburb of Washington, with his mother. His wife, to whom he was married in Baltimore in 1912, had sued him for divorce, and last week an order was issued at Rockville, Md., allowing her $10 a month alimony.

JAPANESE PRINTS SALE ENDS

$19,091 Paid for 737 Numbers—A Hiroshige Brings $210.

The closing sale of the Judson D. Metzgar Japanese color prints at the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon brought $7,035 for the final 235 numbers, bringing the grand total for the entire collection of 737 numbers to $19,091.

The highest price of the afternoon, $210, was paid by Oshima for No. 671, "Semba Station," by Hiroshige, a delicate Summer scene, artist's impression, collector's state, signed by the artist. No. 524, "Three Women Grouped Around a Transparent Screen," by Yeishi, went to Oshima for $100; J. F. Drake paid $160 for No. 525, by Yeishi, "The Courtesan Komurasaki of Kado Tama-ya and Three Attendants Walking Under a Cherry Tree," one of the artist's most important and famous sheets.

METHODIST MISSION FUND.

$2,289,579 Appropriated for the Church's Work in Foreign Fields.

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session yesterday at 150 Fifth Avenue, appropriated $1,255,809, an increase of $67,566 over last year, for foreign missionary work, but only after a lively discussion. The New York branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society added $1,033,770 to this sum, making the total contribution of the Methodist Church to foreign missions for this year $2,289,579.

Discussion over the appropriation originated when Bishops William F. McDowell of Washington, D. C.; Edwin H. Hughes of Massachusetts, and Francis McConnell of Colorado, recalled that the board had adopted at last year's meeting a resolution forbidding the employment for current use of amounts received from legacies and lapsed annuities, and restricting the allotment of such funds to investment in permanent improvements. The Rev. S. Earl Taylor and the Rev. Frank Mason North, Corresponding Secretaries of the board, pleaded that strict adherence to this rule would greatly hamper the work in the foreign field, but Bishop McConnell asserted he would rather see the appropriation for field work in Mexico cut down than witness a violation of the principle adopted a year ago. The board consequently referred the matter to the Committee on General Distribution, and abided by the decision of this body to make the appropriation.

Mrs. E. R. Graham, Corresponding Secretary of the New York Branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, reported that the society had enrolled 353,000 members, had sent out 498 active missionaries, and was operating 1,400 schools, with 42,000 pupils.

McLanahan of Washington, the Rev. Dr. William E. Barton of Chicago, and the Rev. Dr. Andrew M. Brodie of Wichita, Kans.

Military and Mounted Police Day, as yesterday was officially termed in the catalogue, brought an added bit of color to the ring attractions at the National Horse Show. The uniforms of military officers were seen in the ring in the contests for the Prize Cup, won by Lieutenant Larkin of the First New York Field Artillery; in that for the Muurling Cups for pairs of jumpers, won by Lieutenant Gerald T. Hanley of the Rhode Island National Guard, and finally in that for the Canadian Challenge Cup presented by Sir Adam Beck and won by a horse, Pete, belonging to the Second United States Artillery and ridden by Captain Daniel D. Pullen of the Engineer Corps.

The superb body of police, the Traffic Squad, made its appearance in the ring as the feature of the evening session, thirty of them, led by Lieutenant Michael F. Walsh of the Central Office, participating in the exhibition drill which preceded the award of medals to officers and horses. There was a rousing cheer for the boys in blue as they came trooping into the ring to a martial air played by the band. All were mounted on bays with black points, each horse groomed until his skin shone like satin and each rider apparently togged out in a new uniform. On entering the ring they lined up on the south side and saluted Police Commissioner Woods and Chief Inspector Schmittberger, who acted as reviewing officers from the judges' stand in the centre of the ring.

Drill is Intricate.

With a few preliminary flourishes the troop of policemen went at once into the intricate movements of their exhibition drill, the officers being greeted with round after round of cheers as they moved about in apparently inextricable tangles from which after twists and turns they emerged into rank formation as if they were a bit of machinery. It was all very stirring and clever, even if it did savor a bit more of the circus ring than of military drill. The performance wound up with the horses and men in a formation which brought out the letters "P. D.," and of course aroused the liveliest enthusiasm from the crowds on the promenade, who stood four deep all around the ring.

Following this was the contest for the Canadian Challenge Cup in which a dozen officers competed, the prize being awarded to a horse and rider representing the United States Cavalry Service. Lieutenant Hanley's Lansdowne, which won the cup last year and which made the rounds of the jumps splendidly, was for some reason placed fourth and behind his stable companion, Ironsides, a decision that manifestly surprised the crowd of onlookers, who could not quite solve the reason for placing both behind Captain Alexander's Metaphor, who sidled over the first two jumps instead of taking them in his stride.

Showing for the first time in his ring career in a tandem hitch, Bantam King, with Fire Spark as a leader, won the blue ribbon at the evening session for Charles R. Hamilton of Philadelphia, who had won a blue earlier in the day with the two driven as a pair. Bantam King was bred by Judge Moore, and sold by him to Miss Vauclain, whose trainer did not seem able to do anything with him, showy stepper though he is. Mr. Hamilton bought him six weeks ago, and in the hands of his trainer, the high-spirited pony has rapidly developed into a tractable and successful show horse, having been beaten but once, in the class won by the champion Tissind Amity.

Most spectacular of the contests in which the officers in their blue and gold uniforms appeared was the class for teams of two horses which had to take the jumps abreast, the prizes being cups offered by I. J. R. Muurling and a purse of $100. There were five pairs shown, and Lansdowne and Ironsides, which are owned by Lieutenant Gerald T. Hanley of the Rhode Island National Guard and ridden by him regularly as an officer of the Field Artillery of the State, easily won the cups, as they cleared the obstacles well together and without a tick in making the jumps. The second prize went to the pair ridden by Captain Alexander of the Engineers Corps and Lieutenant Card of the Medical Corps of the regular army, but their animals were far behind the militia pair in conformation and performance. Major Mitchell's pair were unfortunate in knocking down the rail fences and so had to be content with third place.

One of the prettiest contests of the afternoon session was that for harness horses, in which Judge Moore, driving Lady Seaton, and Miss Vauclain of Philadelphia, driving her best horse, The Whip, had a most interesting contest. There were several other entries in the class, but the conflict narrowed down to this pair. They drove about the ring several times at top speed and in close competition, each trying to carry the other's horse to a break. Good reinsman as the Judge is, he found his match in the Philadelphia horsewoman, who would not be driven out of the strife for honors through a mistake in the handling of her animal. The spirited brushes delighted the crowd, which cheered each of them riotously and thoroughly enjoyed the contest of wits. It was superiority in action which finally determined the duel in favor of Lady Seaton, everywhere recognized as one of the very best of her type which ever looked through a bridle.

Irvington Model, the wonderful hackney pony which has won blue ribbons almost innumerable in his class when shown in harness, won the first of the championships awarded at the show this year. This handsome little chap never showed to better advantage than he did in the ring yesterday morning when shown in hand, that is, at the end of a long halter. Thus restrained, and relieved from the burden of harness or trap, he showed his exaggerated hock and knee action, which has made him the envy of all hackney breeders, to the very best advantage, and made his winning of the ribbon an almost foregone conclusion before the gaudy rosette was pinned to his bridle.

Model's son, Irvington Fashion, which has inherited much of his daddy's action, though a trifle coarser, won the reserve ribbon with little effort. Both horses are the property of James Cox Brady of the Hamilton Farm at Gladstone, N. J., one of the largest exhibitors at the show.

Same Order in Another Class.

Just before winning the championship Irvington Model had as easily cleaned up in the class for stallions three years old and over, in which class he showed a trifle better, if anything, than he did in the championship contest. Irvington Fashion also got second place in this class, in which it happened that six of the nine animals exhibited were bred by one man, W. D. Henry of Sewickley, Penn., one of his breeding also taking the fourth prize.

Wynnewood, a handsome chestnut hackney, won in the class for three-year-olds of his breed, and so got in line for the championship cup to be awarded this evening. By reason of winning the championship a year ago as a two-year-old, he is now eligible for permanent possession of the trophy, which has been in competition since 1910. A son of imported Aaron, Wynnewood has all the characteristics of a full-blooded hackney, stockiness, good temper, and showy action, as clean-going a youngster as has been shown in the Garden in some time. He is the property of the Delchester Farms of Edgemont, Penn.

Miss Muriel Wiggin had some compensation for her large expenditure in the purchase and importation of Bricket Brilliant in the way of a third prize won by this animal and its mate in the class for pairs of ponies between 13.2 and 14.2, in which the first award went to Charles R. Hamilton's pair Fire Spark and Bantam King, the latter of which had been passed over in the single harness pony class, which was won by Tissington Amity. A couple of the roan four which had won in the class for pony four-in-hands got the second ribbon for the Hamilton Farm.

Sceptre Gleans Further Honors.

Two classes which consumed more than an hour of the time at the afternoon session, and in which the competition was of the most spirited, were for ladies' saddle horses, in which ladies alone rode. In the class for those between 14.2 and 15.2, Mrs. Robert E. Tod again won with Sceptre, the third blue which this sterling mare has won since the opening of the show. Even Lady Adam Beck's inspection could not get away from the outstanding qualities of this mare, which comes pretty close to being the perfection of a lady's saddle horse. Harry La Montagne's Northman, ridden by Miss Lida L. Fleitmann, was as easily second as Sceptre was first.

It took the judges over a half hour to decide on the third and fourth horses from a dozen left in the ring after nine had been sent to the gate. Third honors finally were awarded to George H. Rohling's chestnut gelding, Minstrel, whose manners had much to do with placing him over John T. Spratley's chestnut mare Kitty May.

In the class for horses over 15.2 there was a surprise in the award to Miss Anna A. Austin's chestnut mare, Buren Arnold, as she was placed over such well-known ring horses as A. W. Atkinson's Sparkling Moselle, which was placed second; Mrs. David Wagstaff's Pointex and W. H. Rhodes's Radiant, which, in spite of the fact that he had previously won a blue, was completely overlooked in the awards. Buren Arnold was comparatively unknown, but showed up strongly in quality, conformation, and manners, and so won on her merits.

Among the visitors to the show during yesterday's sessions were P. Pages, Don Carlos Duggan, M. Facio, editor of La Nacion, L. L. Cleet, and J. D. Nelson, from the Argentine Republic, who had their first sight of a North American horse show. These gentlemen are here from Argentina to act as judges of shorthorns at the National Live Stock show to be held at Chicago next week, coming as a return courtesy to the judges from the United States who acted at the shorthorn show in Argentina a year ago, which is the largest cattle show held in the world.

MANY NEWCOMERS IN BOXES.

Persons from Out of Town and Abroad Attend Show at Garden.

A large assembly paid homage to the horse last night, and there was a notable display of fashion. Ermine was much in evidence, and there was also a brilliant showing of jewels, pearls, predominating.

This year the show is attracting many out-of-town people and foreigners, and newcomers were noticeable in the boxes and on the carpeted promenade, both at the evening and afternoon exhibition.

Mrs. Lewis Nixon, who entertained last night in Box 64, wore a black brocaded velvet evening coat, lined with ermine. Miss Lida Louise Fleitmann, in Box 22, wore a short coat of ermine, banded with sealskin. One of the most attractive costumes seen at the evening exhibition was worn by Miss Fanny de Groot Hastings, who was in Box 51. It was of dark blue satin and lavishly embroidered with silver. Over this was worn a deep blue velvet evening coat with bands of sable.

Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman, who had Miss Miriam Harriman with her, paid her first visit to the show last night. She was in Box 55, and many dropped in for a visit during the course of the evening. Mrs. Harriman wore a black velvet coat over a dark blue velvet gown, topped with a large black hat. Her daughter was also in black taffeta and chiffon, with a coat of rose pink edged with sables.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Hine entertained in Box 33. Mrs. Hine wore a black velvet coat over a gown of deep blue and gray furs. Mrs. William H. Moore appeared in a deep purple coat with gray furs. Mrs. David Wagstaff, who had a party in Box 13, was in peacock blue velvet and chiffon, with a large black hat having touches of gold. Mrs. W. Goadby Loew wore a costume of white and black with a touch of green, and a coat of oyster white velvet with sables. Lady Beck wore a light rose-colored evening coat and white fox furs.

Mrs. William E. Iselin had Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cruger Hasell with her in Box 63. Mr. and Mrs. William Ziegler, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lewis L. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burrill, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Wiggin, who had Miss Muriel Wiggin and a group of young people with them; Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Tod, Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Bliss, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Francis Hyde were among other boxholders who entertained.

The afternoon session was lively socially. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs dropped in for a time, also Mrs. E. N. Breitung, who had her daughter, Miss Juliet Breitung, with her. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hazard were also at the matinée. Colonel Daniel Appleton was seen on the promenade, also Mr. and Mrs. Alden S. Blodget, Mr. and Mrs. S. Bryce Wing, Miss Hilda Holmes, Francis Roche, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. J. McVickar, W. B. Henry of Pittsburgh, Henry R. Remsen Coles, and Thomas Bowen.

E. N. Tailer of North Washington Square was a visitor yesterday. Although Mr. Tailer is well advanced in years, he retains a youthful interest in the horse, and has been attending the shows at the Garden ever since they were inaugurated.

Reginald Vanderbilt is to give a luncheon today to the members of the American Hackney Society, of which he is President. It will take place at the Horse Show Club in the Garden.

MAY BE SURPRISES IN TIGER'S LINE-UP

Coach Rush Is Still Experimenting—Hopes That Tibbott Will Be Available in a Pinch.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 14.—Many changes in the personnel of the Princeton 'Varsity this afternoon made it appear as if Coach Rush were far from decided yet as to what eleven men he would finally elect to send against Yale in the Palmer Stadium next Saturday. The centre trio, Captain Hogg, Gennert, and Nourse, seem to be the only men who are reasonably certain of their positions.

Moore, Thomas, Brown, and Eddy all had a long tryout at half back today, Ames running the team at quarter back while Eddy was playing in the new position. Latrobe was in at the doubtful tackle position on the 'Varsity, while the first team was further changed by the use of Winn and Funk at the wing positions during the greater part of the practice.

In the contest with Harvard, Rush gave a complete surprise by starting Thomas, a substitute half back, and there may be other unexpected changes in the line-up when Princeton faces the Elis this week. Hopes are now entertained that Dave Tibbott will be in condition to play or that he will be able to go in and send a drop kick over the bar if it is needed. Moore, Thomas, and Brown will probably be the men from whom the two half back positions will be filled, as there is not much probability of Jack Eddy being shifted from quarter back, in spite of the fact that he was used as a half back part of the time today.

In the secret practice Coach Rush and his assistants started the task of perfecting several offensive formations before the Yale game. The Tigers did not show their full repertoire of plays against the Crimson, but it will be necessary to work up several new formations to take the place of those which were used to the limit on Saturday.

There was no scrimmage in this afternoon's practice, as Rush desired to put in as much time as possible on his new plays. The only scrimmage of the week will probably occur tomorrow, and this is likely to be short. The Tigers have probably now reached top form, as far as individual playing is concerned, and the rest of the week will be devoted to perfecting team play and attempting to eradicate several little faults.

CORNELL 'VARSITY RESTS

But Second-String Men Have Hard Day on Snow-Covered Field.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The Cornell 'Varsity regulars and all the players who played against Michigan had another day's rest today. The other men, however, on the second and third scrub teams engaged in a hard scrimmage and work-out in the Stadium on a gridiron covered with a half foot of snow.

The men were slowed up considerably by the snow blanket which covered the field, but after running down under kicks for an hour, the field was worn down and a scrimmage was held before the coaches took the men in the baseball cage. The coaches plan to send many of the men who played today against the Mass. Aggies when the New Englanders come here Saturday.

Dr. Munford, the team physician, announced today that Earl Bretz, the scrub half back who was seriously injured the week before the Harvard game, will not be in condition to play this week. The coaches expect him to be fit for the Penn game.

BELL WILL PILOT PENN.

Bryant to be Reserve Quarter Back in Game with Wolverines.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—In lining up his Penn forces for the Penn-Michigan battle at Ann Arbor, Mich., Saturday, Bob Folwell has determined upon two maneuvres which he believes will have an important bearing upon Penn's chances for victory. One is a tactical shift, but the second was made necessary because of the effect on Jimmy Bryant, the diminutive field general, of the Dartmouth conflict. Folwell at today's practice on Franklyn Field said he would start Bert Bell at quarter back in the place of Bryant, whose condition does not warrant the chance of starting the game.

Howard will start the Michigan game at fullback. He is now the 'Varsity regular in this position, Folwell declared today, and barring accidents he is sure to be on the gridiron at the first kickoff Saturday. The 'Varsity squad was put through a light signal drill this afternoon.

YOST DECIDES ON SPARKS.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 14.—Tommy Hughitt, 'Varsity quarter back for the seasons of 1913 and 1914, made his appearance on Ferry Field today, and will help Yost and his staff of coaches for the remainder of the week in their preparation for the final game with Penn on Saturday. Hughitt has just finished his second season as coach of Maine University.

Practice today consisted merely in passes, punting, and the ordinary routine, and was held in the face of a blinding snowstorm most of the time. Dunne kicked a number of long spirals, some of which passed the sixty-yard mark. Yost is not expected to give the team any new plays for Folwell's men, as the Wolverine coach was well satisfied with the formations which worked so effectively against the Ithacans. Fielding announced after practice this evening that Sparks would start the final contest at the quarter back position, with Raymond in right half as Maulbetsch's running mate. The statement was somewhat of a surprise, as it was all figured out that Zeiger would get into the game from his showing of the last several weeks.

Stevens Will Play at Home.

It was announced yesterday by the football management at Stevens Tech that the game scheduled for this Saturday with R. P. I. at Troy had been transferred, at the request of the Rensselaer management, and would be played in Hoboken on the same date instead.

LARRY FOX IN ELI ARRAY FOR TIGERS

Oarsman, Playing His First Season of Football, Is Choice Now for Right Guard.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—The Yale coaches allowed the two first elevens a day off. They believe that the 'Varsity will recover its buoyancy before the Princeton game on Saturday and will keep most of the first string players out of the scrimmage practices, which have been ordered for tomorrow and Thursday, closing strenuous preparation for the Tiger game.

The two elevens visited the baseball cage for signal rehearsal this afternoon and general improved physical condition was evident from the return to the line-up of every player except Bob Bingham and Chub Sheldon, who left the squad permanently recently because of illness. Several line-up changes were ordered today, but it is now likely that Yale will take the gridiron on Saturday playing as follows:

Braden, because of a muscle bruise, will probably be unable to play at fullback and Jacques is now expected to receive the assignment. Keeping Braden in reserve as emergency punter and dropkicker will allow the coaches to start Joe Neville at left halfback. Howard Baldridge was able to resume right tackle today, but surprise was occasioned by the substitution of Larry Fox, the crew member, at right guard, replacing Charley Galt, who returned to the eleven after ten day's illness. Fox, who weighs 210 pounds, has played tackle during the three weeks he has been on the football squad. He had never attempted football until this Fall.

YALE BOWL LACKS SEATS.

Capacity Will Be 76,909 for Harvard Game, but Demand Is Greater.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—An announcement by the Yale ticket department tonight stated that there will be 76,909 seats in the Yale Bowl for the Yale-Harvard game on Saturday next week. The statement in part follows:

"The regular seating capacity of the Yale Bowl is 60,617. Prior to the closing of applications it was apparent that the demand for seats would be unprecedented. The Executive Committee of the Board of Control accordingly authorized the erection of about 8,800 additional seats. Even with this increased seating capacity, there remained, after the close of applications, a shortage of about 12,000 seats. This situation demanded either a radical cut in the allotment of seats to graduates and freshmen or further increase in the seating capacity of the bowl. It was ultimately decided to erect 7,472 seats in addition to those already provided for."

The ticket department has been compelled not only to return a large number of applications sent by the general public, but to cut down the list allotted to at least two classes eligible to apply for four tickets each. This resulted in the reduction to two tickets of applications of nongraduates of the various departments of the university and the reduction to two tickets of applications of graduates of the professional schools of the university.

GLOOM IN SOLDIER CAMP.

Scrubs, with Navy Plays, Score Two Touchdowns on 'Varsity.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The Army eleven had two hours of practice today. The gloom in the soldier camp after it was as thick as the darkness which enveloped the field at the conclusion of the drill. It was a decided slump into which the Cadets seemed to have relapsed, and the outcome was discouraging to followers of the team. The scrubs with Navy plays scored two touchdowns and held the 'Varsity to two field goals.

Injuries to some of the best men caused another shift in the line-up of the 'Varsity. Butler's absence since the Notre Dame game is a source of great worry to the coaches. His place at tackle today went to Jack Knight. Ford, who has been out of the game much of the time, got into the line-up to-day, and the coaches sent him to his old berth at half back. House returned to the game for the first time in ten days. He and Shrader were the wing men today. Holmes and Meacham alternated at guard. Schlenker, a substitute tackle, was hurt and had to retire.

MIDDIES WORK IN SECRET.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14.—Secret practice continued this afternoon at the Naval Academy, and almost every likely candidate for the team had an opportunity to play in the actual scrimmage, as well as in the signal and formation drill which preceded it. Welchel and Orr are fighting hard for the quarter back berth. The former had been considered as sure of the position, but Orr's work Saturday was very good, and he is now a worthy competitor.

The men for the positions further back are Martin, Davis, Ingram, Westphal, Perry, Roberts, and Butler. Perry is almost sure of his position on account of his kicking. He is easily the best punter on the squad, and has developed considerable ability as a dropkicker, something almost unknown at the academy for many years.

Pros in Four-Ball Match Today.

Prominent professionals will play in a four-ball golf match at the Essex County and Montclair Links today. L. Martucci, the Essex County professional, will be paired with Herbert Strong of Inwood, against Will McFarland of Hudson River, and W. J. Ehrich, an Essex County amateur. The morning round will be played at Essex County and in the afternoon the play will shift to Montclair.

HARVARD WORKS IN CAGE.

'Varsity Forced by Bad Weather to Practice Indoors.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.—Rain and cold prevented the Harvard 'Varsity team from doing very much work out of doors today, the first and second teams keeping under cover of the baseball cage. The work by electric light lasted from before 3 o'clock until well after 5, and the players were as tired when they finished as if they had been put through a red hot scrimmage.

Reggie Brown worked with a will with the second team, continuing his task of equipping the eleven with the Brown University attack. This will be tried out tomorrow and Thursday against the players who will go against the Providence team. Few of the first string men, it is said, will get into the game.

Captain Dadmun, Robinson, C. Coolidge, and Wheeler, were out of the line-up today. Two of the regulars, who have been out since Saturday, returned, however. These were Harte and Thatcher. Harte's blow on the head was not serious, while Thatcher's leg is all right. Both men will be in trim before the end of the week, but will possibly not do any more hard playing before the team takes the field at New Haven next week.

Snow, who started against Princeton, was the only regular lineman in today's workout. He played right guard with Clark on the other side.

CAPTAIN HEALY ON FIELD.

Columbia Leader Still on Crutches, but May Play Against N. Y. U.

A ray of hope came yesterday to cheer the Columbia coaches and players in the person of Captain Jeff Healy, who appeared on South Field during the practice hours for the first time since his injury in the Election Day game with Stevens. Captain Healy was not in uniform, but he limped about watching the drilling without the use of crutches, and was insistent that he would play in the last game of the season with New York University on South Field, Nov. 25. There is little likelihood that Healy will be able to engage in the Wesleyan game this Saturday, but his knee is improving rapidly.

In practicing some of the new tactics to be used against Wesleyan Saturday Head Coach Metcalf yesterday reshifted Dol Cochran to the backfield from right end, where he has been playing for three weeks. Cochran has been the eleven's most consistent ground gainer, and has been exceptionally free from injuries, so that he is Metcalf's most dependable member of the rear line squad. Monroe was not in uniform, with the result that Cochran had for teammates in the backfield McCabe, I. T. Rosen, and Hegeman. Donnell took Dunn's place at right end and Noble, a veteran substitute, was promoted to Raegener's job at right guard.

N. Y. U. PRACTICE IS SHORT.

Coaches Emphasize Open Plays in Fast Scrimmage.

Practice at New York University yesterday was devoted to scrimmage, and several of the 'Varsity reported for the first time since the Colby game. Nearly all the formations in the Violet repertory were rehearsed, but special emphasis was put on open work and forward passes. Howard Cann, Bernstein, Horigan and Hammerschlag were on the regular backfield and made substantial gains against the scrubs. The prctice was not very long, but frequent changes were made and various combinations tried out. Brin, the little centre, appeared in a suit for the first time in a week and showed his usual aggressiveness.

FORDHAM TRIES NEW PLAYS.

'Varsity Succeeds Well with Tactics Against Fast Prep Team.

The fast Fordham Prep team had its hands full yesterday trying to stop the new attack of the Maroon 'Varsity in the long scrimmage which marked the football activities of the day at Fordham Field. The college men used nothing but the new plays which have been prepared for the Holy Cross game next Saturday, and although it was their first exhibition in actual scrimmaging there was no slip up. Most of the new tactics are built around the end plays which Georgetown used so effectively last week.

Lowe and O'Connell appeared on the field yesterday for the first time this week, but were not permitted to don their uniforms. They will probably play to-morrow.

COLGATE WORKS IN SNOW.

Heavy Downfall Does Not Halt Preparations for Syracuse.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The Colgate football squad is hard at work for the most important game of the season next Saturday, against Syracuse. Today's practice was also long and hard in spite of a heavy fall of snow. Gillo was not permitted to enter either scrimmage, and is taking only light signal drill. Coach Bankart does not intend to chance a setback in the Colgate full back's condition which might interfere with his playing Saturday.

Bek and Watkins, who both sustained slight injuries owing to kicks in the leg, are coming around into good shape again. Hubbell, who has been suffering from a cold in the chest, is also improving.

TO KEEP UP OUIMET FIGHT.

Woodland Golf Club Seeks to Involve State Organization.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The Woodland Golf Club voted unanimously tonight to carry to a finish its fight for the reinstatement in amateur standing of Francis Ouimet, John H. Sullivan, Jr., and Paul Tewksbury, who were disqualified by the United States Golf Association. Some of the speakers at the meeting charged that officials of the Massachusetts Golf Association were responsible for the disqualification of Ouimet, and it was decided that an attempt should be made to have the State Association call a special meeting and go on record in all three cases prior to the meeting of the national association in January.

The three men were declared by the United States Golf Association ineligible to play in amateur tournaments because of their connection with sporting goods stores.

BASEBALL COUNCIL BEGINS ITS WORK

National Association Hears Report Showing General Prosperity Among Leagues.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues met in annual session here today with the owners and officials of minor and major league baseball clubs and delegates from leagues throughout the country in attendance. The meeting will continue through Thursday. President H. M. Sexton of the association was unable to attend because of illness in his family, and in his stead Vice President Murnane presided.

The annual report, submitted by Secretary John H. Farrell today, showed that twenty-six league organizations, embracing 182 cities and towns in the United States and Canada, and employing 4,728 players during the playing season of 1916, had qualified for membership.

Only one qualified member of the National Association disbanded during the last playing season, and that was a Class D league. Of the twenty-six leagues, twenty-five started, and twenty-three finished; one league was disqualified. The Canadian League did not operate on account of war conditions. The attendance this year as a whole exceeded by far that of the 1915 record.

Fifty-nine optional agreements were exercised by National Association clubs and 103 by major leagues. Players reported for release numbered 2,051; for suspension, 590; for reinstatement, 158. Twenty drafts were disallowed and cancelled. The total number of disputed cases handled during the current year was 559, and $24,663 was collected in players' claims and territorial liens, and paid to them without cost of any kind. Only six claims were filed by the Players' Fraternity.

The National League drafted twenty-five players, the American league nineteen, and the National Association fifty-five. Including money refunded for National Association drafts that were disallowed, the National League paid $37,500, American League $23,200, and National Association $22,250, a total of $82,950. The sum of $9,000 was paid on optional agreements between National Association clubs and $6,200 on options exercised by minor league clubs from minors for fifty-nine players.

The amount paid for release by purchase among National Association clubs was $42,631. The sum received for drafted players, optional agreement players, and released-by-purchase players was $134,581, and for options exercised by majors from minors, $30,400. In addition the National Association clubs purchased from major league clubs by optional agreement and outright sale 306 players, paying $135,505 to the major leagues. The grand total of moneys handled was $331,350.

A large budget of disputed cases will be decided by the National Board of Arbitration during the meeting in New Orleans. Applications for holding next year's annual meeting were received from New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Boston, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Nashville, and Springfield, Mass.

Following discussion of the report of Secretary Farrell, appointment of committees, and a preliminary conference by representatives of Class B leagues, the delegates cleared the way for consideration tomorrow of some of the more important questions scheduled for settlement during the sessions here.

The conference of representatives of Class B leagues resulted in the announcement that a formal request would be made for representation on the National Commission of the minor leagues' organization.

WESLEYAN SHOWS FIGHT.

Preparations for Columbia Are Marked by Aggressiveness.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 14.—Coach Kenan started the Wesleyan squad with the usual dummy field drill today, which was followed by a workout in open field blocking and tackling. Two teams were lined up from the kick formation, and practice in running back of kicks was first tried by the 'Varsity. Later the regular men tried defensive work from the kickoff. Kicking from the line of scrimmage followed this work. The ends were pushed hard by the coaches in covering Captain Deetjen's long punts. Boswell and Peck covered the ground well, and the tackling improved. Wesleyan expects to gain much ground against Columbia in the kicking department. Toward the close of the afternoon the 'Varsity team engaged in a short scrimmage with the freshman eleven.

More speed and fight in the line was shown by the 'Varsity than has been shown at any time thus far this season. Coach Kenan expects to have his strongest line-up in the game against Columbia on Saturday. The squad is in good physical shape. Wilbur and Richards of the back field have been bothered somewhat the last few days with bad knees, but both expect to be in good shape for Saturday. Tomorrow the work will be somewhat lighter when the final scrimmage of the year will be held.

LENGTHY RECORD LIST FOR A. A. U. ACTION

HOST OF RECORDS UP FOR DECISION

A. A. U. Committee Will Pass on Many Applications for New Marks at Sunday's Session.

The full list of records claimed to have been established by track and field performers and swimmers in the course of the last year, upon which the Record Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union will have to pass when it meets next Sunday, a day prior to the general convention of the governing amateur organization at the Hotel Astor, was made public yesterday by Chairman Frederick J. V. Delany. Many are the records claimed, but few are those which will be chosen. On track and field there is not the usual abundant crop of new marks, but the swimming list is probably the longest compiled in years. For the first time in A. A. U. history women swimmers are looking for recognition on the record books, and lots of marks alleged to have been established since September of last year have been presented for adoption.

Only five records on the flat have been applied for, and George Bronder's mark of 190 feet 6 inches in the javelin throw, made at the national championships at Newark, is the only field record upon whose worthiness the Record Committee will have to pass judgment.

In the hurdling department nine applications are entered for the 120-yard high hurdle figures, with Bob Simpson's wonderful mark of 14 3-5 seconds, which time he has produced evidence to show, was made twice by him, heading the list. Fred Kelly and Earl Thomson, the two clever Los Angeles timber toppers, and Fred Murray of San Francisco, are looking for credit for the same honor which Simpson claims. Murray and Kelly's best times were 15 seconds flat, equaling the recognized world's record. Thomson filed claim for 14 4-5 seconds, while Simpson avers that beginning May 13 this year, he did 0:14 4-5 on three occasions, once when he won the national championship at Newark, and on two other occasions he did 0:14 3-5 seconds. Simpson is also asking for a record of 0:23 3-5 for the 220-yard low hurdles. Classed with the noteworthy performances is Fred Murray's great feat of running over the 120-yard three feet high hurdles in 0:14 2-5.

Ludy Langer of Los Angeles, Herbert E. Vollmer, New York A. C.; Claire Galligan of New Rochelle, and Olga Dorfner of California divide almost evenly the application for swimming records.

The list as compiled by the Record Committee and issued yesterday follows:

FORM NEW BILLIARD BODY.

Association Asks Jurisdiction in Five New England States.

A New England Amateur Billiard Players' Association has now been formed in Boston, with the backing of the Boston Athletic Association and of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. The new association is really the outgrowth of the plan of expansion which was instituted last year by the national association, and is expected to stimulate competitive play in the section which it controls. In the formal request for affiliation with the national association the new body asks for jurisdiction over the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island.

It is expected that several championship events will be held by the new association, among them a Class A balkline championship of New England. More important than this, however, is the probability that the New England Association may stage the national Class A balkline championship at Boston. This would mean that Nathan Hall, rated as the most proficient player in New England, would compete in the tournament.

Three officers of the national association were present in Boston when the New England Association was formed—Louis Reusche, President; G. O. Rudolphy, Treasurer, and J. Ferdinand Poggenburg.

T. Henry Clarkson is President of the New England Association and Nathan Hall, Vice President. Richard Engstrom is rTeasurer. The Executive Committee is composed of Charles Carter, Albert Geiger, Jr., and Charles Eaton of the Boston A. A.; F. E. Merrill of the Boston City Club, and F. L. Holmes.

MISKE WILL MEET MOHA.

Boxer Reconsiders Refusal, and Thereby Averts Punishment.

Billy Miske, the St. Paul light-heavyweight, appeared before the Boxing Commission yesterday afternoon to make a statement in regard to his refusal to meet Bob Moha, the Milwaukee boxer, in a ten-round bout at the Broadway Sporting Club, Tuesday night.

After a conference with his manager, Miske decided to abide by the ruling of the commission, and box Moha at the Broadway Club next Friday night. At the outset of the proceedings Commissioner Wenck informed Miske that if he failed to comply he would be liable to a six months' suspension.

Lewis and Britton in Poor Bout.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Ted Lewis of England and Jack Britton of Chicago boxed an unsatisfactory draw here tonight over the twelve round distance. As a boxing exhibition it was not, perhaps, the worst thing of the season, but as a fight it was nil. It was their fourth mix-up here. Britton led for three rounds, and the last round was his. Lewis had four intermediate rounds, and the rest were even.

Jackson to Head Trinity Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 14.—Myron Robinson Jackson, '19, of Norwich, was today elected Captain of Trinity's 1917 football team. Jackson has played at guard for three seasons.

Barber Named Assistant Manager.

Lester A. Barber was yesterday elected assistant manager of the fencing team by the Committee on Managers at Columbia University. There had been a vacancy in the fencing management since last season.

BOWIE MEET, LAST IN THE EAST, OPENS

Water Lady Captures the Inaugural Handicap and Rebel Springs a Surprise.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 14.—Racing started on its last lap of the Maryland season and all tracks in the East when the Southern Maryland Racing Association's meeting opened here this afternoon with fine prospects for the sport, which will continue fourteen days. Nearly all the thoroughbreds that made the racing at Laurel and Pimlico a success have been shipped here, but many of the top notchers were reserved for later events. There was a good crowd to see the opening races in spite of cloudy weather and the track, though not fast, was in fairly good condition.

The feature of the card was the Inaugural Handicap at seven furlongs, the conditions being such as to allow two-year-olds to start, but not one of the young division faced the starter. The choice of the public was Mrs. James Arthur's Water Lady. E. Ambrose had the mount on the favorite and he carefully nursed her along, so that at the finish she outgamed Thornhill, the Belmont castoff, which was almost neglected in the mutuel speculation. T. J. Smith's Marse Henry was well burdened for a three-year-old with 106 pounds, but R. Ball managed to land him in third place.

There was a startling shock for the form players in the first race in which the three placed horses were all practically neglected. The winner turned up in Rebel, which failed to graduate from the maiden class when owned by John E. Madden. The winning brackets were gained today in the colors of A. R. Joplin, and the few who bought tickets on this disappointing youngster reaped the nice amount of $106 in return for a $2 investment.

MAINE WILL DEFEND TITLE.

Entries of Intercollegiate Champion Harriers Lost in Transit.

The University of Maine will defend its title in the intercollegiate cross-country championship race at New Haven on Nov. 25, for it has been discovered that the entries of the Orono institution were lost while in transit by mail to George B. Brown of the New York University, Secretary of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. The mistake was discovered yesterday when Brown received a telegram from S. N. Dunham, manager of the Maine team, asking an explanation of the announcement that Maine's entries has not been received. Dunham notified Brown that he had filed a special delivery letter to the Secretary at Orono, Me., on Oct. 31, and it should have been received by Brown two days before the date for the closing of entries.

Brown immediately started an investigation, and learned that a special delivery letter addressed to him had been received at New York University on Nov. 1, and had been signed for by another person, who, it is presumed, either lost, misplaced, or threw away the letter.

At any rate, Brown late last night wired Maine's manager to forward his eight entries by telegraph, and that there would be no doubt about their acceptance, owing to the conditions which surrounded the disappearance of the mailed entries.

HARRIERS TO SEEK TITLE.

Six Teams Named for Senior Metropolitan Race Saturday.

Six teams have been nominated for the Senior Metropolitan cross-county championship run to be held next Saturday over the six-mile Van Cortlandt Park trail, entries for which closed with the Amateur Athletic Union last night. Representatives of the New York A. C., Irish-American A. C., Millrose A. A., Yonkers Y. M. C. A., Long Island A. C., and Mohawk A. A., the Junior champions, will battle for the team honors.

The Irish-American A. C., through Secretary Joe Dickman, has entered Hannes Kolehmainen as one of its team of six men. Dickman said last night that the Finnish star would surely carry the Winged Fist emblem on Saturday, despite the fact that he is still registered with the A. A. U. as unattached. Tom Barden, the Yonkers runner, is also named on the Irish-American combination, although on Monday he entered individually as unattached. The team named by the champions is comparatively weak, and will probably find its master in the aggregation of the Millrose A. A.

New York A. C.—H. Holden, Hugh Honohan, H. Ackerman, A. Robertson, William Anderson, E. F. Dorgen, C. J. McSorley, J. J. Mitchell.

Millrose A. A.—Nick Gianakopulos, Willie Kyronen, Charles Pores, Mike Devanney, Matt Geis, John Soukof, J. Best, J. O'Connor.

Yonkers Y. M. C. A. — George F. Holden, Russell Springsteen, Wilton M. Smith, Hugh McLosky, Merwin Mase, Charles Richards, Raymond Howe, Harry Russell.

Long Island A. C.—Sydney Leslie, James W. Plant, George H. Messler, Casper Schefer, George Critchley, Matthew Lynch, Walter Leslie, Henry Carlton, Frank R. Plant, Erling Norem.

Mohawk A. C.—J. Dolan, Fred Travalena, J. Brooks, Arthur Roth, Harry Jameson, G. Fitzpatrick, S. Weiss, S. Cohen.

Irish - American A. C. — Hannes Kolehmainen, Tom Barden, Willie Fogel, Jim Sullivan, J. Walsh, J. Bertrand.

Individual Entries—Lester P. Dutka, Hungarian-American A. C.; Thomas F. Barden, unattached.

TO RANK TENNIS MEN SOON.

Standing Will Be Determined at Meeting in Pittsburgh.

Charles Garland of Pittsburgh, Secretary of the Ranking Committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, when seen in this city yesterday said that the standing of the tennis players of the country would be determined at a meeting to be held in Pittsburgh about two weeks hence. The report, however, will not be given to the public until the meeting of the Executive Committee of the association on Dec. 8. He said there was a complex problem before the committee and that it might take two or even three days of work to determine upon the standing of the tennis men, it being necessary to go through a multitude of records in relation to the singles places alone. As yet there has not been a meeting of the full committee, most of the preliminary discussion having been done by mail.

Post Office Notice.

Information is received from Postmaster Morgan that many letters mailed in the United States addressed for delivery in Australia and other foreign countries which are subject to the Postal Union postage rate are prepaid at the United States domestic rate, the senders of such letters probably being under the impression that the two-cent domestic postage rate is applicable to said letters.

The only foreign destinations to which the two-cent letter rate applies are Canada, Cuba, Mexico, the Republic of Panama, the Canal Zone, Bahamas, Barbados, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dutch West Indies, Leeward Islands, Newfoundland, Germany, (by direct steamers only,) England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, New Zealand, and the City of Shanghai, China. To all other places the rate is 5 cents for the first ounce or fraction of an ounce and 3 cents for each additional ounce or fraction of an ounce, which must be fully prepaid or the letters become liable on delivery to a charge equal to double the amount of the deficient postage. For instance, a single rate letter prepaid only 2 cents would be shortpaid 3 cents, and consequently subject to an additional postage charge of 6 cents.

As charges for postage due on shortpaid letters give rise to much complaint, the Postmaster cautions the patrons of the Post Office respecting the matter.

Postmaster Morgan announces that admissible liquids and oils, pastes, salves, and other articles easily liquefiable may on and after Dec. 1, 1916, be sent by international parcel post from the United States to French Guiana, and from that country to the United States, provided said articles are packed in accordance with the requirements of the Postal Laws and Regulations for such articles in the domestic mails.

Circulars containing full information upon the subject may be obtained at the General Post Office or at any post office station.

Mortgage Bonds Providing Liberal Returns

The investor who takes the trouble to investigate securities can always discover some good mortgage bonds yielding returns that apparently are too high to be truly conservative.

We invite requests for our Letter No. 141, that describes three bonds of this kind, and explains why such well-secured obligations can be purchased at comparatively low prices.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Show Many Gains—Rails Lag—Strike Fear and a Forlorn Political Hope.

The stock market yesterday was influenced by an improbable fear and by a still more improbable hope. The market as a whole during part of the day and a portion of the list throughout the session were influenced by the fear that a railroad strike would be declared should the railroads find any means of postponing the effective date of the eight-hour law which was passed as a means of averting the strike which the railroad unions threatened as a means of obtaining the shorter basic day.

That fear was based on the statements made by the brotherhood representatives following their conference on Monday with the railroad officers at a meeting which was called to work out an agreement as to the manner of applying the new law. Several of the railroads have already moved to obtain injunctions against the application of this law, and in doing this they are merely following in the course outlined immediately after the passage of the law, and even before the railroad executives had left the National capital. The brotherhood representatives said then that if the law was made inoperative they would surely strike to enforce their demands; in repeating that statement after Monday's conference they were not taking a new stand.

Quite possibly the stock market would have taken less notice of the matter were it not that it was still apparently in need of further liquidation following the upturn in prices which preceded and immediately followed Election Day. The talk of a railroad strike was made use of effectively by the bears, but the opportunity was not left entirely to the shorts to profit by this occasion to cover their commitments. There was a good deal of buying for the long account as well, and this extended to the railroad group as well as to others, though owing to the pressure upon the rails the buying was less effective in them than it was elsewhere in turning prices upward toward the close of the day.

The rise was sharpest toward the end of the session, when the suggestion was circulated on the Stock Exchange that Mr. Hughes, after all, had won the election, the prediction being put forth that the official count in California and in some other States would shift success from the Democratic to the Republican camp. That surely seemed a forlorn hope, and here again the effect of this factor would probably not have been very great had it not been for the previous marking down of prices and for the fact that the metal shares, notably the Steel shares, had maintained strength in contrast with the reactionary tendency in many other parts of the list. For this strength professional effort, which sought to counteract bearish effort in other parts very strong position of the metal trade, steel and copper specifically, made it easy to bid up prices here. The alternate play of the forces which were uppermost in yesterday's market discussion, maintained the record which the market has established for irregularity since the National election. Many of the railroad stocks ended with net losses, although the list disclosed many very substantial gains among the industrials.

No doubt the railroad brotherhoods are much in earnest in their insistence upon the benefits promised them by the eight-hour law, which they accepted as a sufficient inducement to abandon their threatened strike, but if originally the strike was highly improbable, which it was from the time that the National Administration stepped in to bring the parties together, it is still more improbable now. A refusal by the railroads to apply the law, which would lead to a cessation of operation if the unions insisted upon the position which they have held all along, would prove vastly more costly than the acceptance by the railroads of the burdens imposed by the law during the time it would take to obtain a final decision on the points raised against the law's constitutionality. It is reasonably to be expected that the problems involved in this law will be handled in a way which will not renew the grave anxiety of last Summer, certainly in a way which will avoid the breach between the railroads and their men which was averted by public mandate through the part which the President and Congress took in dealing with the controversy between them.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Cross Currents.

Final prices, showing substantial advances in most of the industrial and mining stocks, by no means told the story of yesterday's market. In the early part of the session so many cross currents swept over the list that it was difficult to discover any particular trend. Central Leather opened at 105, shortly sold down to 102¼, and then moved above the first quotation in a series of rapid advances. Steel acted uncertainly around 120½ for a time, and the later progress forward was of a distinctly jerky order. The railroads looked quite poorly throughout the day. The copper shares wavered at times, but on the whole acted as a stabilizing influence for the entire market and were among the leaders when prices took on a strong appearance in the afternoon.

Extra Cash for Wall Street Men.

The high cost of living has not been felt seriously by workers in most of the big brokerage firms because of extra earnings which they have made for overtime. One of the leading houses has paid an extra week's wages to all employes for every month since the beginning of the active markets. If this practice is kept up it will mean a year and a quarter's pay for one year's work. Another house has been setting aside a share of its profits for employes, and has already made two substantial distributions. Most other firms have made liberal provision for the overtime put in by their clerks and runners. These bonuses will not interfere with the usual Christmas distribution, which is expected this year to break all records for size.

More Cotton to Be Picked.

A traveler who returned to Wall Street yesterday after several weeks spent in the cotton belt reported that a great deal of the staple still remained to be picked. The farmers who got their crop planted late, he said, were confident that most of the bolls which had not yet matured would open in good condition before bad weather came and would figure in the year's yield. The question arises from this condition of the late crop whether or not additions to the cotton yield this month will have any effect on prices. The basic cause of 20-cent cotton, presumably, is the belief among speculators that production will prove to be less than the demand.

Drastic Reorganizations.

Nearly every one approves of drastic railroad reorganizations except the owners of the roads' securities. It is hard to make the average holder of a divisional first mortgage bond understand that he is not entitled to another security just as good to be put out by the reorganized company. There are companies in the Southwest which have been borrowing all the money that has been put into improvements and using all of their earnings over operating costs to pay the interest charges. Those roads were among the first to succumb when floods, drought, and depression followed one another in their territory. Not having any margin of safety, they automatically ceased paying some of their interest charges when revenues fell off. In the reorganizations bankers have had to cut down fixed charges to such a point that a portion of earnings can be spared for improvements, and first mortgage bonds on some of the branch lines have been sacrificed to permit of a real readjustment.

Russian Exchange Stronger.

The strength that developed yesterday in rubles was regarded as a confirmation of the belief that the negotiations for the proposed Russian Government loan would soon be completed. Last week the rate for rubles went down to 29.60 for demand, while yesterday it was above 30, closing at 30.25 for demand and 30.30 for cables. An official announcement is expected the latter part of this week or the early part of next. It is generally understood that the loan will be for $50,000,000 and that the face rate will be 5½ per cent. and the maturity five years. The loan is to be unsecured, and will be offered at an attractive price.

Interest in Check Collections.

An indication of the keen interest which bankers all over the country take in the check collection problem is found in the quick response made by them to the letter and questionnaire recently sent out by the American Bankers' Association. A committee of the organization, appointed at the annual convention held in Kansas City, is making a careful investigation of the whole subject of check collections, with special reference to the system inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board. Jerome Thralls, Secretary of the Clearing House section of the association, had a list of fourteen questions sent by the respective State association to about 28,000 banks and trust companies. The first mail brought replies from over 20 per cent. of the banks, an unusually high percentage, and a large number have come in every day since. It will take considerable time to have the answers tabulated, but when that is done the result of the inquiry will be made public.

100% Investment Service

If you are a mortgage buyer, and are interested in sound securities yielding a reasonable income, ask yourself these questions about the service to which you—or any investor—is entitled without charge:

Is my interest collected without charge or deduction, and remitted promptly in cash on the due date?

Is my principal paid me promptly in cash on the very day when my loan matures, without "ifs" or "buts" or requests that I renew?

Can I select the year when my principal will mature and be repaid?

Will the institution which sold me my mortgage, regard it as good collateral for a loan if needed?

Does it hold out to me reasonable assurance of a ready market at a fair price, such as a bond house of the better class maintains for its offerings?

Is the institution with which I deal always able to give me a mortgage of the exact size I want?

The service given investors by S. W. Straus & Co. is complete and thorough, and is given without charge. The investor receives the full interest rate paid by the borrower—5½%. It will be to your advantage to investigate the Straus Plan of issuing real estate first mortgages in the form of bonds. These bonds are in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100 so as to accommodate funds of any amount.

$30,000,000 PLEDGED FOR THE ROCK ISLAND

Joint Reorganization Committee Adopts Plan for Refinancing the Road.

BANKERS BACK THE SCHEME

$11,555,889 Will Be Available After Paying Off Loans and Receivers' Certificates.

The plan of reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, which went into receivers' hands in April, 1915, was announced late yesterday afternoon by the Joint Reorganization Committee, representing the Debenture and the Amster and Hayden Stockholders' Committees. It provides for the purchase by stockholders of 7 per cent. preferred stock at par to the extent of 40 per cent. of their present holdings; or, in other words, for every share of their present stock they will receive $40 par value of the new preferred stock and $100 par value of the new common stock.

The common stock issue of the new company will be the same as that of the present company, and the new cash thus provided will be approximately $30,000,000. The present $20,000,000 par value of debentures are to be exchanged for an equal amount par value 6 per cent. preferred stock. The coupons maturing Jan. 15, 1916, and July 15, 1916, on the present debentures are to be paid in cash, and the 6 per cent. stock will be cumulative up to 5 per cent. per annum.

For the purposes of the cash requirements the Joint Reorganization Committee has entered into an agreement with Speyer & Co. and Hayden, Stone & Co. whereby the bankers will purchase, for $29,743,889, less a commission of 3 per cent., the $29,743,889 par value 7 per cent. preferred stock and the $74,359,722 par value of common stock of the new company which is to be issued. The money to be raised will be applied substantially as follows:

To the payment or acquisition of:

Two-year collateral secured gold notes	$7,500,000
Central Trust Co. collateral secured loan	2,500,000
Hayden, Stone & Co. collateral secured loan	1,600,000
Receivers' certificates, Series A...	5,488,000
Receivers' certificates, Series B...	1,100,000
	$18,188,000

As a result of paying off the receivers' certificates and the collateral secured loans there will be presently released to the new company approximately $26,000,000 first and refunding bonds, besides other bonds, which will become available for future improvements. From this $26,000,000 to be released the plan contemplates the sale of approximately $15,000,000 face amount of the first and refunding bonds so that the new company will be in a position to meet the $12,500,000 first gold mortgage 6s maturing July, 1917, without resorting to the cash raised from the sale of the preferred stock to the shareholders.

The plan leaves undisturbed $257,758,383 of secured obligations and equipment trusts of the railway company and its subsidiary corporations; and through the exchange of the debentures into preferred stock and the payment of the various obligations to be met out of the cash requirement of the plan the fixed charges of the railway company will be reduced from $12,277,096 to $10,022,696, an annual reduction of $2,054,400.

The total amount of fixed charge obligations now outstanding aggregates $295,946,383, as against $257,758,383 under the plan. The total amount of stock now outstanding is $74,359,722, as against $124,103,611 under the plan.

The proportion of fixed charge obligations is at present 25.12 per cent., while under the reorganization plan it is 48.14 per cent., the difference being accounted for by the conversion of the debentures into preferred stock and the issue of $29,743,889 of new preferred stock for cash.

The Joint Reorganization Committee consists of Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers Trust Company, Chairman; Nathan L. Amster, Emile K. Boisot, Charles Hayden, James Speyer and S. Davies Warfield.

The plan has been approved by the three committees, who recommended it to the security holders they represent. Holders of stock and debentures who desire to participate in the reorganization must deposit their holdings on or before Dec. 14.

The Debenture Committee, of which Mr. Prosser is Chairman, has approved of the plan and gives notice to holders of certificates of deposit issued under the agreement of July 19, 1915, that within thirty days they may withdraw from the agreement, if they so desire, by surrendering their certificates at the Bankers Trust Company. If they so elect their bonds will be returned to them.

Strawboard, Axles, and Other Articles Are Classified.

MacDonald & Sons, San Francisco, won yesterday before the Board of General Appraisers when it was decided the Collector erred in his return on strawboard. The authorities classified it at 25 per cent. as paper not specially provided for, while the importers asked a rate of 5 per cent. as "common paper box board, not coated, lined, embossed, &c." Judge Fischer, reversing the Collector, said in his decision that the claim for the lower rate was fully substantiated by the uncontradicted proof offered on behalf of the importers.

Adverse action was taken by the board in a protest filed by S. V. Beek against the action of the Collector at Buffalo in levying 10 per cent. duty on so-called scrap steel engine axles. The Collector based his assessment on the paragraph specifying "axles, or parts thereof, axle bars, axle blanks, or forgings for axles, whether of iron or steel, without reference to the stage or state of manufacture, not specially provided for." Free entry as "scrap steel" was claimed. Judge Fischer, overruling the protest, said there was nothing to show that the merchandise was "fit only to be remanufactured," as provided by the paragraph under which duty exemption was made.

Oberle & Henry, New Orleans, made an importation of quarries packed in boxes or crates made from American shooks. No contest was made over the rate of duty exacted on the quarries. The Collector admitted the shooks free of duty as American goods returned. The Appraiser held, however, that certain items, such as paper, nails, and labor used in packing, were properly subject to duty. The importers claimed that these last named items were nondutiable in view of the fact that the shooks were of American origin. Judge Waite said in his decision that if it had been shown that the material and labor were used in making up the shooks and putting them in condition to be filled with merchandise, the charge therefor would be free. No explanation having been given upon that point, the board was bound to recognize that in the ordinary course of handling goods of this kind labor, paper, and nails would be necessary. After the trial, the importers, in a brief by Churchill, Marlow & Hines, conceded that the paper was dutiable. The board accordingly reached the conclusion that all of the items objected to in the protest were dutiable as assessed by the Collector.

Morrison & Risman, Buffalo, claimed that boiler plates and ends were exempt from duty as steel scrap. The Collector took a 12 per cent. duty under the provision for boiler or other plate steel or iron. The Appraiser reported that the merchandise consisted of second-hand boiler plates (without tubes) which had been carefully taken apart and not scrapped. He said they were fit to be used again. Witnesses for the importers testified that the boiler parts in question were purchased as scrap and sold for remelting purposes. Judge Fischer, in a decision for the board, said that it was in no sense definitely established that the condition of the merchandise as imported was such as to render it fit only to be remanufactured. The Collector was affirmed.

As several importers failed to support their claims for lower duty on hats made of split bamboo, not trimmed or blocked, the Collector at New York was affirmed in returning the goods at 25 per cent. Entry was claimed at 15 per cent. as manufactures of wood. The protestants included the American Trading Company, Carlowitz & Co., Isler & Guye, Olivier & Co., and the John Zimmermann Company.

The portion referred to is the 8th Avenue and 162nd Street Connection, Section No. 10-C, and comprises a two track railroad, partly elevated and partly underground, located in the Borough of the Bronx, beginning at east building line of Sedgwick Avenue at a point north of One Hundred and Sixty-first Street, thence running under private property and public streets to a point near the intersection of One Hundred and Sixty-second Street and Ogden Avenue; thence under One Hundred and Sixty-second Street to a point at or near Anderson Avenue; thence continuing in the same direction under Anderson Avenue and private property to a point near the east building line of Anderson Avenue; thence continuing over private property and public streets to a point near River Avenue; thence curving northeasterly into River Avenue, where a connection is made with the Municipal Rapid Transit Railroad in River Avenue.

A fuller description of the work and other requirements, provisions, and specifications are given in the Invitation to Contractors and in the form of Contract, Contract Drawings, Bond and Contractor's Proposal, which are to be deemed a part of this notice and copies of which may be inspected and purchased at said office of the Chief Engineer of the Company.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE OPENED by the Lighthouse Inspector, Tompkinsville, N. Y., at 2 o'clock P. M., December 8, 1916, for building and delivering overboard at the contractor's dock the hull of a single-screw, wood, power, derrick barge. Information upon application to the above office.

SHIP GOLD TO ARGENTINA.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. to Send Another $2,500,000.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company withdrew $2,500,000 in gold coin from the Sub-Treasury yesterday for shipment to Buenos Aires. This institution a few days ago shipped $1,000,000 to South America, and when the latest transaction is put through the total gold movement to the Southern Continent will have amounted to about $4,100,000 since Oct. 20.

The metal is being shipped partly to offset the balance of trade which has been in favor of Argentina for some time. Argentine exchange at this centre has been at a premium for several weeks. Of the shipments so far announced, $100,000 was destined to Montevideo, Uruguay.

The Assay Office began yesterday to melt down the $21,500,000 Canadian gold bars bought by the Federal Reserve Bank two weeks ago. Approximately $5,000,000 was transferred from the Reserve Bank's vaults to the Assay Office in the morning. The gold was originally put in the bank's vaults because a series of heavy receipts at the Government institution for account of J. P. Morgan & Co. supplied the smelting force with more than a week's work.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

It was a market of rumors on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. They ranged from reports that an important error had been discovered in the California count which was likely to give the State to Hughes, to rumors that another submarine crisis was impending. Some attention was also accorded to the renewed threatening aspect of the railroad labor situation. The market changed its tone several times in the day.

Motor Truck Co. Sold.

The Smith Form-A-Truck Company of Chicago, manufacturers of a motor-truck unit that can be attached to the chassis of a low-priced car, has been purchased by Michaelis & Co. and associates, it was announced yesterday. It is said that the company's capacity will be increased immediately to take care of a demand which exceeds the present output. Sales for the current year are expected to reach $3,000,000, with net earn-

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat market experienced a sharp reaction during yesterday's operations, and closing prices were 1½c to 3¼c below the final of Monday. Early in the day prices were firmer, and, at one time, showed gains of ⅝c to 1½c on scattered buying, due to strength abroad and reports of very moderate offers from other exporting countries in the European markets. On the advance the market appeared top-heavy, and when selling orders came to light values declined sharply, losing ⅝c to 4½c from the top. In the local cash market No. 1 Durum was quoted at $2.27¾; No. 2 hard Winter, $2.04¾; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.11¾; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.14¼, all free on board, New York.

CORN.

Early strength in the corn market sent values to new high levels, but the advance was not maintained owing to later peace talk and the severe break in wheat which led to heavy unloading by commission houses under which the list closed 2¼ to 3⅝c net lower, and bottom for the day. The cash market here was easy, with No. 2 yellow quoted at $1.16¾, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, ten-day shipment.

OATS.

Good commission house buying and the early strength in corn gave oats a higher opening, and the market was later affected by export demand which resulted in sales of about 500,000 bushels. With the decided break in other markets after midday oats weakened also, closing ⅝c net lower and bottom for the day. Cash oats easy here as follows: Standard, 62@62½c; No. 2 white, 62½@63c; No. 3 white, 61½@62c; No. 4 white, 61@61½c; fancy clipped white, 66@67½c; ordinary clipped white, 64@65½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Opening a shade higher, the provision list soon developed a weaker tone, and was rather heavy most of the session, with the break in grain and selling for profits, coupled with big receipts at Western points and easy hogs. Commission houses were on both sides of the market. Near the close efforts to cover sent prices up a little from the bottom, and the final undertone was fairly steady. Chicago arrivals were 40,000 hogs, with 50,000 expected today. Kansas City had 20,000 and Omaha 11,000 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was firm early in the day with more or less buying on the strength in cotton and on firmness in the crude position. There was considerable selling on the advance, however, and subsequently the market developed weakness, closing 6 to 13 points net lower. Total sales were 35,700 barrels. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The market for sugar futures ruled more or less irregular throughout the day, with near months, particularly the spot month, November, showing weakness, with the new crop months about unchanged. Wall Street sold nearby sugars, with the buying scattered. The close was 11 points net lower to 1 point net higher. Sales for the day were 11,850 tons. Range of prices:

The local market for refined sugar was dull and unchanged at 7.50@7.60c for fine granulated. Withdrawals were light and the export inquiry was only moderate, and for January and February shipment only. The market for raw sugar was quiet and lower on a sale of 10,500 bags Cubas, afloat, to a local refiner at 5⅜c, cost and freight, equal to 6.40c, duty paid. Quotations follow: Centrifugals, 6.40c; molasses, 5.53c, and cost and freight, 5⅜c.

COFFEE.

After opening unchanged to 2 points higher, the market for coffee futures turned easier, closing at a net decline of 7 to 13 points. Sales were reported of 68,250 bags, including exchanges of December for July at 40 to 42 points, March for September at 32 points, and March for May at 11 points. Near months were relatively easy under scattering liquidation, while there was considerable trade selling from both local and Southern sources. The local spot market was very quiet, with prices ¼c lower at 9⅝c for Rio 7s and 10¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 9,955 cases. Arrivals continue light, and the market for high qualities of fresh gathered shows a firm tone, although the offerings appear to be about sufficient for current needs at unchanged prices. Medium and lower grades move rather slowly. Storage eggs continue active, with considerable speculative trading, and prices show a further sharp advance, closing firm as quoted. Nearby white eggs in light supply. Uniformly fancy new-laid goods are very scarce, and, while the demand is light, the few such arriving are salable at strong prices; mixed and irregular qualities show a wide range of value. SOUTHERN OIL & TRANSPORT

When you consider that the Texas Company's stock (the only other oil company that builds its own carrying ships) is selling at about $223—shares offered three years ago at $74—and recall the high price for Mexican Petroleum stock on the Exchange (now about 109 and selling at 41 in 1912) you get some idea of the future of SOUTHERN OIL and TRANSPORT CORPORATION, with its vast development possibilities ahead, under the best possible management.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Monday...3¼@3½ " " " " "

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Coal Trade Tension Lessens.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that the anthracite situation has quieted down very noticeably in the last week. It was not that the supply has increased or that the demand for coal at the regular price has subsided, but the panicky feeling on the part of consumers has pretty well disappeared for the time being. With the public less clamorous retail dealers are not so much inclined to offer extravagant prices for immediate delivery, and as a result smaller premiums are being obtained by independent operators and middlemen. A sudden let-up in the demand for bituminous developed right after election day, and the market has weakened slightly since then.

Jute Prices Jump Sharply.

The outstanding feature of the burlap trade yesterday was the sharp jump in jute prices at London as a result of the sinking of the steamer Morazan, with 20,000 bales of jute aboard, by a Teutonic undersea boat in the Mediterranean Sea. The last price on jute to reach this market during the day was £37 10s. An active cloth business was done here yesterday, where 7½-ounce 40-inch burlaps were held at 7.90 cents, and 8-ounce goods, in the same width, at 8 cents. Sales of the latter goods were reported at 7.95 cents for arrival at the end of January, a figure said to be very high for a delivery so far away. Heavy goods sold well, 10-ounce "forties" at 8.60 cents and 10½-ounce goods of the same kind at 8.75 cents. Sellers are now holding the latter cloths all the way from 8¾ to 9 cents.

The Crude Rubber Situation.

After weeks of continued firmness, prices on Brazilian crude rubber are beginning to soften a little. Just why this is the case was not said yesterday, but up-river fine was quoted at 81 cents a pound spot. For prompt shipment it could be had at 79¾ cents. Up-river coarse was worth 46¼ cents a pound, while Upper Caucho ball was held at 47 cents. A little firmer feeling was reported on the plantation grades, with first latex held at 67 cents and smoked sheets at a half cent less. While there was a fair amount of buying by some of the smaller users, there was not much disposition shown by the bigger manufacturers to trade.

Platinum Is Climbing Again.

After a week or so of quiet, platinum prices have again started upward. Yesterday the quotation for the medium metal was $105 an ounce, while that containing 10 per cent. of iridium moved up to $110 an ounce. Medium platinum is metal that contains from 1 to 3 per cent. of iridium after refining, due to the fact that platinum, palladium, and iridium are found in one group. While the refining process will remove from raw platinum all the palladium there may be in it, there is always a small percentage of iridium left.

Novel Umbrellas for Women.

Among the umbrella novelties now being shown for women in this city is one that differs considerably from the general run of this merchandise so far as the handle is concerned. In this case, instead of the usual wood or composition handle, there is a loop handle of braided leather, by means of which the umbrella can be slung from the wrist or forearm when not in use. The coverings of these umbrellas are in several popular colors, making them especially suitable for use with the colored raincoats that many women are wearing this season. The house showing this novelty is also offering several new things in canes for women.

Ribbon Trade Is Satisfactory.

Although there has been a slight falling off in the trade in ribbons lately, the manufacturers report that orders are coming in in a satisfactory volume. The immediate demand is for wide goods, anything from eight to ten inches. For next Spring present indications point to the use of narrow goods. The sport wear fad is expected to provide quite a demand for striped materials, in one and a half and two inch widths, for use as hat bandings.

Gray Goods Sales Limited.

While the further rise in cotton yesterday tended to make the mills tighten up still more on gray goods prices it evidently did not cause buyers enough concern to force them into the market. From all appearances trading was tighter than it had been for some little time. Printcloths seemed to be especially quiet, about the only interesting thing being the sale of a small quantity of 38½-inch 64-60s at 8¼ cents for December delivery. Little of the business done during the day ran beyond Feb. 1, neither buyers nor sellers appearing anxious to go much beyond that point. Coarse goods were quiet for the most part. Closing printcloth prices were:

39-inch, 80-80s	10¾c	38½-inch, 64-60s	*8¼c
39-inch, 72-76s	9¼c	38½-inch, 64-56s	7⅞c
39-inch, 68-72s	9c	38½-inch, 60-52s	7⅛c
39-inch, 56-44s	6⅜c	38½-inch, 60-48s	7c
38½-inch, 64-64s	8¼c	27-inch, 64-60s	*5½c

Color Service for Textile Trade.

The color service which the Color Card Association of the United States proposes to inaugurate will consist of a circular letter system that will keep subscribers up to the minute on the color situation. With the advent of any vogue, the manufacturers in various branches of the textile trade will be informed immediately. All tendencies in color styles will be carefully noted and transmitted to subscribers. With the great importance attaching to colors during the coming Spring, the service is expected to be especially valuable to the manufacturers.

Trouble with Silk Deliveries.

The slackening up of the demand in the silk trade is a source of gratification rather than complaint for the manufacturers. Quite some difficulty has been experienced in making prompt deliveries for one reason or another. The labor situation is one contributory cause, and the delays occasioned in the transit of the goods through the throwing and dyeing houses is another reason why deliveries are held up. Prospects in the trade for a successful Spring season are reported as satisfactory, with the amount of business already on the books of the manufacturers and the style trend considered. Satins and taffetas continue to lead in the demand.

COTTON PRICES SOAR TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

NET GAIN OF 27--29 POINTS

Census Bureau's Report on Supply and Distribution Shows Consumption of 1,643,000 Bales.

As a result of a combination of bullish influences cotton yesterday made a further advance to new high levels, and the close found the market fairly well intrenched above the 20-cent level for the active options. The undertone became especially strong in the late trading, with heavy covering by professional and trade shorts. The close represented a net gain of 27 to 29 points.

From a crop point of view the bitter cold wave which is now sweeping over the South is of vital interest, as the bears have derived much comfort from the open Autumn, and have predicted that the plant would keep on fruiting indefinitely, with picking likely to extend well into December. Temperatures yesterday, however, were as low as 12 and 14 degrees in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas, and the forecast called for a continuance of the cold wave until today, when the freezing weather will be followed by slowly rising temperatures. The predictions called for minimum temperatures of 12 to 14 degrees over the Southwest, with the cold wave extending eastward.

The Southwestern traveler of one of the local spot firms estimates that seven-eighths of the Oklahoma crop has been picked, with Texas showing about 95 per cent. picked.

The Census Bureau yesterday issued its report on the supply and distribution of cotton, and the figures came fully up to bullish expectations. The amount of cotton consumed by American mills during October was placed at 555,349 bales of lint cotton, compared with 529,227 during September, and 500,762 during October last year. The consumption for the three months of the season is placed at 1,643,000 bales, compared with 1,463,000 last year. Active spindles in operation exceed those of last year by approximately 1,165,000 spindles. The amount of cotton in the possession of spinners is placed at 1,722,000 bales, against 1,345,000 bales last year. The amount in public storage and at compresses, however, is only 3,673,000 bales, against 4,170,000 last year. The amount of linters consumed during October is placed at 66,000 bales, against 77,000 bales in October last year.

After opening at an advance of 12 to 24 points, the market turned irregular. Bears were encouraged by the report that the British Government would requisition all freight room on British steamers for grain and metal, and that this might result in higher freight rates on cotton. One of the big lines operating between New Orleans and Liverpool has raised its rate on cotton from $2.10 a hundred to $2.25, the equivalent of 75 cents a bale.

Liverpool's stock of cotton on Nov. 10, including the amount afloat and now on shipboard awaiting clearances, represents a total of about 925,000 bales. These figures compare with 782,000 bales on Oct. 20.

Trading at times was active. On the early depressions, firms with Chicago and other Western connections were heavy buyers. The late rise was accentuated by considerable local covering. There is a feeling that the circulation of bullish crop estimates prior to the publication of the Government figures early in December will stimulate bullish confidence and buying for long account.

MANY CUSTOMS DISPUTES.

The Last Year's Work of the Board of General Appraisers.

Details of the work of the Board of General Appraisers during the Government's fiscal year ended June 30 last, as reported to the Secretary of the Treasury, were made available for publication yesterday. It was shown that on July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, there were 76,007 protests in classifications cases awaiting decision by the board. There were received during the period covered by the reports 18,115 protests, making a grand total of 94,122. Decisions were made in the year in 19,650 cases.

The report stated that, of the more than 59,000 cases on the suspended files, the larger portion were suspended under the 5 per cent. issue, the test case in which is to come up in the Supreme Court, probably next month. It appeared that in the total number of suspended cases there were many covering more than one issue that have been docketed, tried, and submitted on the evidence and ready for decision by the board when the Supreme Court shall have passed on the test case now pending. The remaining issues in these cases in most instances have been settled.

It was set forth that 2,044 opinions of General Appraisers were copied and prepared for promulgation, with schedules covering 19,650 protests. Certified copies of these decisions were sent to various Government officers and to attorneys and importers.

On July 1, 1915, the board had 2,451 reappraisement appeals pending for action by single General Appraisers and 647 appeals for action by boards of three General Appraisers, making a total of 3,098 appeals pending. During the fiscal year just reported, 5,096 reappraisement appeals were received for action by single General Appraisers, and 2,568 appeals for action by boards of three, making appeals pending and received 10,762. Of this number 5,719 were decided by single General Appraisers, with 1,828 remaining undisposed of. It was shown by the report that 2,316 appeals were decided by boards and 899 pending at the close of the fiscal year.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Will Sell Madison Square Garden at Auction on Dec. 8—East Eighty-fifth Street Investment—Bronx Block Front Purchase—Cash Register Company Leases Building.

As a result of the financial difficulties, in which the Madison Square Garden has been involved for several months, it was announced yesterday that the property would be sold at auction on Dec. 8, in the Vesey Street Salesroom. Bryan L. Kennelly will act as auctioneer. The property was assessed last year at $3,000,000, of which $2,700,000 is land value. It covers the block bounded by Fourth and Madison Avenues, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Streets.

The sale is the result of a foreclosure suit instituted last June against the owners, the F. & D. Company, of which Louis Boissevain is President, by the New York Life Insurance Company, to recover a mortgage of $2,300,000. With interest and unpaid taxes the judgment amounts to $2,358,501. There is also a second mortgage of $650,000 held by Thomas W. Joyce, who is understood to represent the estate of the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

The owning company purchased the Garden in June, 1911, for about $3,300,000. A petition in voluntary bankruptcy was filed on Monday with liabilities of $3,035,879 and assets of $2,753,141.

East Eighty-fifth Street Deal.

The five-story apartment house at 107 East Eighty-fifth Street, just east of Park Avenue, has been sold by Richard H. Morrison for an investor. The plot is 25.6 by 102.2. William B. May & Co. represented the buyer in the deal and the seller was represented by Duff & Conger.

Buyers for Private Dwelling.

H. S. Lines sold for A. D. Crane, executor, 217 East 115th Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 18 by 100 to a client for occupancy.

The estate of Charles Solsine sold 44 East Forty-ninth Street, a four-story dwelling, 21.6 by 100.5 between Madison and Park Avenues, scheduled by Joseph P. Day to be auctioned yesterday. Louise Jacob, who owns and occupies the adjoining property, the buyer.

Myra C. Kunkler purchased 326 East Sixty-fifth Street, a three-story private dwelling on a lot 20 by 100.5 from Mary I. Murtaugh.

Big Auction List.

The auction room was unusually active yesterday, and outside buyers took most of the offerings. In all Western districts fair weather prevailed.

A storm now central over the Florida peninsula will move northeastward and be attended by rains Wednesday in the South Atlantic States, otherwise the weather will be generally fair Wednesday and Thursday in the States east of the Mississippi River.

Temperature will be considerably lower Wednesday in the Middle and South Atlantic States, and low temperatures will continue in other districts east of the Mississippi River during the next forty-eight hours.

Storm warnings are displayed on the Atlantic Coast at and south of the Virginia Capes and on the east Gulf Coast.

MRS. ASTOR HOSTESS TO SOCIAL WORKERS

Immigration Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce Her Guests.

SEEK BETTER CITIZENSHIP

Distinguished Men and Women Included Among the Eighty-seven Invited.

Mrs. Vincent Astor gave last evening as her first entertainment of the season a large dinner at the Astor town house, 840 Fifth Avenue, for the members of the Immigration Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, made up of well-known men and women. It was the first time the Astor town house had been opened for a dinner of this kind, but it was not the first entertainment at which Mrs. Astor had been the hostess to aid in the work of the Americanization of immigrants. Her first large dinner was on Oct. 15, 1915, when she entertained at dinner at 122 East Seventy-eighth Street, and at which the scope of the work of the National Americanization Committee was made plain.

One of its objects is the enactment of uniform laws in order to arrive at a uniform interpretation of citizenship in this country, and to put the committee in touch with schools and colleges, Government agencies and foreign newspapers, and to reach especially those immigrants whose work touches on national defenses, such as munitions plants, mines, quarries, and railways. She also gave several luncheons last Autumn for the committee, at one of which Colonel Roosevelt made an address.

Mr. Astor was unable, owing to another engagement, to be present last night, and Mrs. Astor, who received in the drawing room, had with her the women who were to act as the assistant hostesses at the various tables. These included Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, Mrs. George Cabot Ward, Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, Miss Frances A. Keller, and Miss Harriette Post.

The dinner was served at 8:30 at eight tables decorated with roses, in the large dining room, and during it the objects of the committee were discussed, and a few brief speeches were made at its close.

Among the eighty-seven guests asked were John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education; John Aspegren, Robert Bacon, Nicholas Murray Butler, A. Barton Hepburn, Felix M. Warburg, Marcus M. Marks, Dr. Thomas Darlington, Julius Rosenwald, George Cabot Ward, Charles E. Falconer of Baltimore, Joseph E. Hubinger, President of the New Haven Chamber of Commerce; E. M. Clendenning of Kansas City, Professor J. H. Cuntz, Gano Dunn, J. Rogers Flannery of Pittsburgh, J. N. Francolini, John M. Humphrey, President of the Chamber of Commerce of Wilkes-Barre, Penn.; W. A. Law of Philadelphia, Dr. Bruce H. Payne of Nashville, Tenn., Wolfgang H. Preuss, I. W. Schmid of Detroit, Dr. Antonio Stella, H. H. Wheaton of Washington, R. B. Woodward of Rochester, J. L. Zook of Chicago, and Louis R. Cheney of Hartford.

The special purpose of the dinner was to start the Americanization program for 1917. During the past year this committee and the Federal Bureau of Education and many local Chambers of Commerce have been active in the work of Americanizing immigrants, and have been assisted by various employers of labor and the heads of many industries in securing a better understanding of the value of American citizenship among their employes.

FEARS FOREIGN COMPETITION

City Bank Official Sounds Warning at Sphinx Club Dinner.

William F. Kels, Vice President of the National City Bank, speaking before the Sphinx Club last night at a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria, warned business men and manufacturers in the United States not to delude themselves with the belief that the prosperity in trade that had been built up on the exportation of munitions of war would not be seriously jeopardized by severe competition by war-impoverished Europe.

Mr. Kels asserted that it was known that the Allies had already held economic conferences to plan for the future and that England was contemplating a protective tariff, which would enable it to meet new conditions when hostilities had drawn to a close. He said it was also known that agreements had been entered into covering future trade which might be detrimental to our own, and that the Central Powers likewise were already preparing for the economic contest by which they hoped to refill their depleted coffers.

Mr. Kels quoted statistics in proof of the contention that the country's exports, hugely inflated by the demand for war materials, showed a falling off of articles normally sent out to other nations.

"We find that the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury assuring the people that there is no occasion to fear competition from Europe after the war; that Europe is industrially crippled and commercially prostrate," said Mr. Kels. "But we also have the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission asserting that Europe will be able to produce in greater volume and on a closer margin than heretofore. Whatever is the truth, we should find out the facts and prepare for what is to come."

"If we deduct from the value of our exports the value of these war materials and supplies and make due allowances for inflated values, the actual quantity of our normal exports for the year 1916 will be found to be less than the year 1914, whereas our imports, making the same deductions, will be found to be a little more."

Mr. Kels said that more important than this was the fact that the United States would have to face competition in its home markets and would have to adopt wise legislative measures to protect the $40,000,000,000 worth of goods it sold within its own borders annually.

Other speakers were Edward James Cattell, City statistician of Philadelphia; Isaac Franklin Russell, and James E. Bennett.

WANT EDISON LIGHT AT 3 CENTS AN HOUR

Consumers' League Demands Appraisal of Electric Company's Property.

REDUCTION OFFER OPPOSED

Drop to 7 Cents Declared to be Only Fraction of What Service Board Should Demand.

When the Public Service Commission meets at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to decide whether the offer of the New York Edison Company to reduce its rates shall be accepted a demand will be made by the Electrical League of New York, Inc., through its counsel, Frank R. Greene, that the commission proceed at once to appraise the property owned by the company and its subsidiaries in an effort to discover a just basis upon which to reckon fair compensation.

The demand, backed by a large number of the company's customers, will come as a surprise to the commission, for up to late yesterday afternoon there had been no thought but that the commission would meet, accept the company's offer, and adjourn.

The league has figures and data upon which it bases computations to show that about 3 cents a kilowatt hour would be a reasonable charge in Manhattan and the Bronx. The offer of the company was that the maximum rate to be charged for electric current in every part of those boroughs should be reduced from 8 cents to 7½ cents per kilowatt hour for the first half of 1917 and to 7 cents thereafter. It was said that consumers would save $750,000 during the first six months of the year and total of $1,750,000 for the year. The company also agreed that if the saving did not amount to $750,000 for the first six months to make up the difference in a further reduction.

Chairman Oscar S. Straus of the Public Service Commission and Commissioner Hayward and City Chamberlain Milo R. Maltbie, members of the committee to consider the rate, expressed themselves pleased with the offer. Mayor Mitchel also expressed gratification over the result of the conferences.

Nothing was said about any appraisal of the company's property, but the inference was that the concession would make an appraisal unnecessary and that that part of the arrangement between the company and the commission made in 1915 when the rate was reduced from 10 cents to 8 would continue under the new arrangement.

The Electrical League was incorporated on Sept. 22, 1916, with Ragland Momael, Vice President and General Manager of the Pressure Lighting Company, as its consulting engineer. Mr. Greene said that the league had a large membership, representing all parts of the city and that the list of members was growing daily. No attempt was made to take part in any of the proceedings before the commission, because it was deemed wiser to wait and see what the outcome was. Mr. Greene said yesterday that the outcome has been so unsatisfactory that the league had resolved to insist upon an appraisal of the company's property.

"The company having offered," he said, "to give $1,750,000 to its customers in Manhattan and the Bronx during the coming year, a time when the cost of all of the commodities it uses has increased greatly, the inference is that it could give a much larger sum and still earn fair dividends for its stockholders."

He thought that the only way to find out the fair price for current would be through an appraisal. He called attention to the fact that an appraisal of the property of the Brooklyn Edison Company had resulted in shaving millions off of the company's valuation.

The demand of the league upon the commission for an appraisal will be based upon figures obtained by the Legislative Investigation Committee in 1906 and on facts gathered recently by the league itself. Mr. Greene said that according to the data reported by the Legislative Committee the maximum value of all property owned by the Edison Company, without allowing for depreciation, was $23,089,781.84.

"That this was a liberal valuation of the Edison Company plant at that time," he said, "is clearly shown by the records of the organization of the company on May 1, 1901, when it took over several small electric companies operating in Manhattan. The total capitalization of these small companies amounted to less than $20,000,000, for which the Edison Company made a blanket entry on its books, 'plant and property, $78,000,000.' Through this simple hydraulic operation of high finance approximately $58,000,000 of water was injected into the New York Edison Company at the beginning of its career.

"The electric consumers have been paying the New York Edison Company excessive rates on this fictitious investment for over fifteen years. Through a system of capitalization (on its books) the enormous profits derived from its extortionate rates, the New York Edison Company now claims that its investment is approximately $132,000,000, and that its rates for current to electric users should be based on this grossly inflated figure."

A pamphlet of figures issued by the league, and which will be used by Mr. Greene in his argument before the commission in favor of an appraisal, presents many tables to show that the company had on Jan. 1, 1916, a cash surplus of $35,501,290.35. The pamphlet asmilies over the reduction "forced" by the Public Service Commission, when Edward E. McCall was its Chairman, of from 10 cents to 8 and says of it:

"By increasing the number of kilowatt hours to be paid for at the maximum rate of 8 cents from 250 in its 10-cent rate to 900 in its 8-cent schedule and one-half a cent per hour for bulb renewals, which were included in the 10-cent rate, the New York Edison Company practically nullified the commission's order reducing the rate to 8 cents. The McCall Commission made no attempt to stop this jugglery which reduced its widely heralded 20 per cent. reduction to less than 2 per cent."

Mr. Greene said that the league was sure that the maximum rate for current in Manhattan and the Bronx should not be more than three cents, and referred to the fact that in many cities in the country the rate was around that figure.

"There are over 140,000 users of electric current in Manhattan and the Bronx," he said, "who are supplied by the Edison Company. The unorganized condition of electric consumers has made them easy prey for the companies with their trained experts, attorneys, &c., to appear before legislative and other bodies when the question of rates was being discussed. Just at present we are not going to concern ourselves with the rate question. We are going to insist that an appraisal of the company's property be made by the Public Service Commission."

RYZON Boiled Dumplings

Mix RYZON, flour and salt together and sift them into a bowl, add shortening and cut it in with a knife or rub it in with the tips of the fingers. Add liquid gradually and drop from a spoon on the top of a boiling pot-pie. Cover closely and do not remove cover for twenty minutes. Serve immediately. Sufficient for ten dumplings.

People could not exist without phosphate—it is essential in food. RYZON is made with new and better phosphate.

It is a collection of short stories, many of which already have been published serially, and, while all are good examples of the author's style, there are at least two that are far above even her very high standard.—New York Herald.

What Keeps the Outside Men Waiting Inside?

It's their longhand reports or a few letters that stenographers cannot find time to write that wastes their time and a great deal of money.

A few minutes of Edison Dictation by a salesman will clean up his office business and allow him to get out where the orders are!

You owe this to your men as well as the business. And besides it's better to have less "talk" and more reports in writing for reference, and a clear understanding.

Phone or write us today: "I will dictate a letter the Edison Way."
